PREFACE

For clearness' sake we shall divide our preface into the following heads —

I The Author—his life and writings

II. Writers on Bhartrihari :

[A] Commentators, critics &c.;

[B] Translators; and

[C] Books about Bhartrihari

III Works and writings wherein we find stanzas from Bhartrihari's Śatakas either with any particular note or notice about them or without anything of the sort

IV Sequel.

V. Places of interest relating to Bhartrihari

VI A plea for the present edition

Following this order we shall now take them one by one in hand, and dealing separately with each give our opinion upon all of them in turn

[A] BHARTRIHARI'S LIFE

The father of Bhartrihari is said to have been one Gandharvasen (गंधर्वसेन), who had also got a younger son Vikramāditya (विक्रमादित्य) from his second wife, the daughter of the chief of Dhârâ (धारा), the then capital of Mâlhwâ Bhartrihari and Vikrama were, therefore, sons of the same father by different mothers. The chief of Dhârâ took great pains and care in educating his two grandsons, who soon acquired mastery in the several Śâstrâs, Laws, Ethics, Archery, Music, Dancing and all other polite arts and princely accomplishments. Though the old chief liked both his grandsons yet his love was naturally stronger for Vikrama than Bhartrihari. Consequently, after finding the former quite well up in every branch of Literature, Science and Art, he being himself devoid of any male issue, one day thought of giving his Râjya to Vikrama, and summoning him to his presence told him his heart's wish. But Vikrama nobly answered him thus. "It is not proper for me to reign before my elder brother; please, therefore, let Bhartrihari rule over the State and I will conduct the administration as his prime minister." The old Râjâ was quite pleased with the high-mindedness of young Vikrama, and subsequently through Vikrama's earnest entreaties, he made Bhartrihari the king of his territory. Vikrama thereupon changed the capital of Mâlhwâ from Dhârâ to Ujain, and there gave himself heart and soul to the good government of the country, as the prime minister of his elder brother Bhartrihari, though well-versed in the Śâstrâs, fell so much in love of women that he passed day after day, and night after night in the seraglio, and left every thing pertaining to the State into the hands of his brother Vikrama, on whose hands the onerous and responsible duties of government did not hang heavy. was however, very sorry for the dissolute conduct of Bhartihari and he spared no pains to estrange the king's heart from women of whom he had a large number as his wives and mistresses, and devote his attention to the affairs of the kingdom God had put into his trust. But, as mostly common in such cases, the more he offered his sound and wise counsels, the further went the heart of Bhartihari from Vikrama; so much so that disaffection took its root into the former's mind, and the result was that the once loving brothers soon became inveterate enemies to each other. The fire of hatred was kindled with increased strength by the fuel of Zenânâ intrigue and court influence which had quite enslaved the man in Bhartihari. In the end, Vikrama was cruelly forced to take off his hands from the premiership and go abroad into the country as an exile, leaving Bhartihari to himself and his loves. After his leaving Ujjen, Vikrama travelled throughout India Proper, and was once near Dâccâ in Eastern Bengal, where he lived for some time and established himself. This place is still known as Vikrampur after him.

° Colonel Todd says that Bhartihari, the eldest son of Gundrupsen, was so devoted to his wife that he neglected the affairs of government, which made his brother expostulate with him. This coming to his wife's ears, she insisted on the punishment of Vikrama (see Todd's "Annals & Antiquities of Rajasthan," Vol II p 369 foot note, popular edition, Calcutta 1884)

Having nothing more to do with Vikrama and his movements, we again return to Ujjein and find Bhartrihari to be daily sinking more and more into luxury and licentiousness. As he never cared a straw for the good government of his kingdom, his subjects became totally tired of his recklessness, and becoming disgusted with his vices they were forced to disregard his authority. Anarchy soon came into being, and there was nothing but disorder and confusion throughout Mâlwa. In the meantime it so happened that the henpecked husband was one day convinced of the infidelity of his queen through the present of some virtuous fruit by a pious Brâhmana †. Her infidelity being clearly discovered, the Râni rushed away from her husband's presence and dashed herself to pieces by falling down from the heights of the palace. Bhartrihari then took another wife, Pingalâ (पिङ्गला), with whom he soon became attached as before. One day having gone deer-shooting he saw that one of his shikarees who had shot a buck being himself bitten by a venomous snake was soon † Opinions differ widely on the name of this particular Rani. Some say her name to be Anangasenâ (अनङ्ग सेना) some Pingalâ (पिङ्गला), some Padmakshî (पद्माक्षी) others Bhanamati (भानमती). In the भरतखण्डअर्वाचीनकोष by Mr R B Godbole, the name is stated to be पद्माक्षी, she is also called there to be पिङ्गला on her being restored to life after death.

† See our note on stanza 2 (Niti) also Todd's "Annals & Antiquities of Rajasthan" Vol II p 369 laid a corpse on the ground. But the thing which struck him most was that the doe of the dead buck came to the spot and threw herself dead on her husband's antlers, and similar to this was the case of the shukaree's wife who on discovering the death of her husband, burnt herself with her lord on her self-made pyre. The Râjâ ran home in amazement and explained to Pingalâ the wonderful events of his day's excursion. But Pingalâ, to his great surprise, coolly remarked that there was nothing strange and extraordinary in the story, for a true suttee could even burn herself without having recourse to fire. Hushing up the matter for sometime the king again went out shooting in the forest, and to put to test the truth and fidelity of Pingalâ, he sent one of his attendants to the queen with his clothes soaked in blood to report his death by a tiger. On hearing the sad tidings Pingalâ, calmly (to all outward appearance) took over the Râjâ's bloody clothes, put them on the ground, made her last bow to her husband's accoutrements and rose no more. The Râjâ, when he came to know the heart-rending catastrophe was quite overwhelmed with grief, left the palace and went out to forest to lead the life of a pious ascetic so admirably depicted by him in his *Vairâgya Śataka. There he met with the great Yôgi Gôrakshanâth (योगी गोरक्षनाथ) who initiated him into the secrets of Mysticism. It is generally believed here that Bhattarhari by his austere practices of yôga, attained to immortality.

[B.] BHARTRIHARI'S WRITINGS

The Three Śatakas on Nīti, Śringāra and Vairāgya, the Vākya-pādiya (वाक्यपादीय, a grammatical commentary in terse and pithy Sanskrit prose), and the Bhattikāvya (भट्टिकाव्यम्, a Grammatical poem) are the works which are generally ascribed to Bhartrihari. Almost all the scholars who have made their acquaintance with Bhartrihari and his works are unanimous in their opinion that Bhartrihari is the undisputed author of the Śatakas and the Vākya-pādiya which furnishes us with a certain clue to the solution of the much disputed question of Bhartrihari's age and authorship. But as to Bhartrihari's authorship of the Bhattikāvya different persons hold different opinions. However erudite discussions on the point by Messrs. Colebrooke, Telang, Peterson &c have proved it beyond any shadow of doubt that Bhattikavi (भट्टिकवि) the author of the भट्टिकाव्य is quite a different person, and he cannot be identified with Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि) the author of the Śatakas. To make Bhartrihari the author of the भट्टिकाव्य there is no stronger ground than the identity of name Bharata (भरत) in his commentary on भट्टी gives the name of the author as भर्तृहरि, but says nothing more about it. In another commentary of भट्टिकाव्य which has been published in Calcutta, the author is described as the son of Śrī Swāmi (श्री स्वामि) and as a great Grammarian. This opinion is also corroborated by Colebrooke in his essay on Sanskrit and Prākrit

Poetry where he remarks,——“The author was भर्तृहरि, not, as might be supposed from the name, the celebrated brother of विक्रमादित्य, but a Grammarian and poet who was son of श्रीधरस्वामि as we are informed by one of his scholasts विद्याविनोद” According to Bohn. भर्तृहरि the Grammarian and author of भट्टिकाव्य is of a later date than भर्तृहरि the author of the Śatakas with whom he is erroneously confounded. Dr Bhâu Dâj is of opinion that भट्टी was probably the son of भर्तृहरि Dr. Râjendra Lal Mitra in his notices of Sanskrit Manuscripts Vol VI p 145 concludes that भट्टी and भर्तृहरि are two distinct personages.

[C] AN ESTIMATE OF THE ŚATAKAS

The Śatakas are not mere collections of elegant sayings from different authors as suggested by some, because a certain link of thought and diction connecting the stanzas distinctly points to their being written by one and the same hand Prof Tawney remarks that the terse and epigrammatic character of these stanzas distinguishes them from the mass of Indian Literature and brings them more and more into accordance with European canons of taste

Prof Lassen, in his ‘Indische Alterthumskunde’ (Vol II p 1174), expresses his opinion that this character “renders them conspicuous among the productions of the Indian Muse They place before us in terse and pithy language the Indian views about the chief aspirations of youth manhood and old age, about love, about concern with the things of this world, and about retirement from them into lonely contemplation. On account of the perfect art with which they are composed, these short poems are worthy of being ranked among the masterpieces of Indian Genius Some of them are connected in sense, as the description of the seasons, others form a whole by themselves and may most fitly be compared to miniature paintings as presenting to us a complete picture in the narrow frame of one strophe ”

II. WRITERS ON BHARTRIHARI.

(A) COMMENTATORS , CRITICS &C.

1 In the “Asiatic Researches” Vol. IX p 141, Bhartrihari is said to have reigned for fourteen years and to have then been succeeded by his younger brother Vikramâditya. It is also maintained that Bhartrihari himself founded the era.

2 Dr Bhâu Dâji, in his paper on Kâlidâsa, questions the contemporaneity of Bhartrihari and Vikrama, and says.—“He (Bhartrihari) is commonly but erroneously supposed to be a brother of Vikrama, as the 5th couplet of Vanâgya Śataka shews, Viz. that the author was an eminent poet dissatisfied with the reception he met with at the courts of several princes whom he visited in hope of reward ”

° The couplet here alluded to is उत्खातं निधि &c, from a careful perusal of which we cannot, however endorse the opinion of Dr BhauDaji The point has also been elaborately discussed & refuted by Mr Telang (See Bombay Sanskrit Series No XI. p 19)

Dr. Bühn Dāji also speaks of Bhartṛihari as one of the nine gems ⁶

At another place confounding Bhartṛihari with Bhartṛimandha (भर्तृमेण्ड), he makes Bhartṛihari a contemporary of Kālidāsa

3. Dr. Böhlen countenances the theory that the three Śātakas are mere compilations made by Bhartṛihari, a mere collection of "elegant extracts" from the works of previous writers. †

Von Böhlen accepts the identity of the Bhartṛihari of the Śātakas and the Hari of the Vākya-padiya ‡

On the authority of Roger, Böhlen relates that Bhartṛihari had 300 wives, and was addicted to a voluptuous life. But having been severely reprov'd by his father for his dissolute conduct, he repudiated his wives, and collected, not composed, these Śātakas by making selections from older writers.

Von Böhlen published in 1833 at Berlin the first European Edition of the Śātakas

4. According to Prof. Colebrooke, some other person than Bhartṛihari had probably put forth these Śātakas under Bhartṛihari's name §

5. Pandit Durgā Prasād of Jeypore in conjunction with Dr. P. Peterson, writes that Bhartṛihari the author of the Śatakas and Vākya-pādiya flourished in the middle of the 7th century A D *

6. Mr. K T. Telang adheres to the tradition of Bhartrihari's full authorship of the Śatakas. †

In Telang's opinion Bhartrihari probably flourished somewhere later than Kālidāsa and a good deal earlier than the beginning of the 6th. century A C. It is based on the following two reasons.—

(1) There is a stanza ‡ in the Nītiśataka which is also found in the Panchatantra which may safely be taken to have been composed not later than 500 A C. Therefore, Bhartrihari must have flourished at least half a century before that date. (2) Again, from stanza 95 Nīti, Parashurāma is regarded as an incarnation of Vishnu, but it is doubtful whether Kālidāsa held the same opinion.

Bhartrihari must, therefore, be later in age than Kālidāsa §

Mr Telang again says:— Vikrama, the founder of the Samvat Era, flourished about 56 B C But granting Bhartrihari to be the author of Vākya-pādiya, we cannot accept him to be the brother of this Vikrama. Because, it is clear from the Vākya-pādiya that it were Chandrâchârya (चन्द्राचार्य) and others who brought the great commentary of Pâtanjali (पातंजलि) into general use, and according to Râjatarangini, Chandrâchârya and his colleagues flourished in the reign of King Abhimanyu (अभिमन्यु), i e between 45 and 65 A. C

Led by the observations of Dr Kern in his Preface to the Brihatsamhita, where he argues that Vikramāditya according to the unanimous testimony of Hindu Astronomers, of the Arabian Astronomer Albruni, of Kalhana Pandita (कल्हणपंडित), and of Hiouen Thsang, was commonly regarded as the founder of what is known as the Shaka (शाका) or Shâlivâhan Era (शालिवाहनसम्बत्), and as having flourished about 78 A C, and not 56 B C, Mr K T Telang after remarking that this will enable us to reconcile the several statements which we receive from tradition, thinks as a conclusion, grounded on a basis not very unstable, that Bhartrihari flourished about the close of the first and the beginning of the second century of the Christian Era *

7 Prof Lassen is of opinion that the composition of the three hundred short poems, which by universal tradition are ascribed to Bhartrihari, must be placed before the overthrow of the Gupta Dynasty. He further places the date of the author of these Śatakas at the end of the third century A C, but he does not accept the tradition that he was Bhartrihari.

8 Relying upon a Chinese tradition, Prof Max Müller thinks Bhartrihari to be a Buddhist † The professor also suggests that Kshapanaka (क्षपणक) may be another name of Bhartrihari. *

° See Bombay Sanskrit series No XI p XVI

† 'The Buddhist flavour' which Prof Max Müller smells in the Śatakas, is however very difficult to be detected by us after a careful study of the poem. Moreover the theory will utterly fall to the ground when we find in the body of the work references to the Trinity (stanza 1 in the Śringara Śataka), to the ten incarnations of Vishnu (stanza 95 Niti) to the Vedas, Smritis, & Puranas (stanza 79 in the Varagya Śataka) and to the Vedantic character of the whole poem especially to that of the opening stanza of Niti.

9. Dr. P. Peterson.

For Dr P Peterson's opinion see under Pandit Durgâ Prasâd (5).

10. M. Regnaud, in the Preface to his prose translation, contends that the legend connecting Bhartrihari and Vikramâditya cannot be accepted, as some of the stanzas attributed to Bhartrihari must be subsequent to the period of Shankarâchâryya (शंकराचार्य्य). †

11. Abraham Roger.

For Roger's opinion on Bhartrihari, see under Bohlen (3).

12. According to Mr Sashagiri Sâstri, King Vikramâditya was the son of a Brahman named Chandragupta (चन्द्रगुप्त) who took four wives, each of the four principal castes. Four sons, viz - Vararuchi (वररुचि) Vikrama (विक्रम), Bhatti (भट्टी) and Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि) were born to him respectively by his Brahmin, Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shûdra wives. Vikramâditya became King, and Bhartrihari served him as his prime minister.

13. After quoting the remarks of Lassen, Prof. Tawney says:—

* See note on stanza 1 in Niti

† For the refutation of this theory, see Bombay Sanskrit Series No XI pp IX & X.

“considering the great uncertainty which attaches to Hindu Literary History, we may perhaps consider ourselves fortunate that there is something like a consensus as to the date of these poems. A century more or less is, after all, of trifling moment in Indian Chronology. The question of their authorship we must be content to leave in the midst in which it has been involved by the traditions of Indian sages and the conjectures of Western critics. So much at any rate is certain that our author, if not himself a king was thoroughly at home in the detail of Indian Court life” *

Prof Tawney in his foot-note on the word ‘परिजन’ (which occurs in stanza 18 of the Varâgya Śataka) thinks that this expression falls in with the legend that Bhartrihari was a king and quitted his throne in a fit of disgust †

14 Prof Vaman Shivram Apte M. A., at page 1192 of his Sanskrit-English Dictionary has the following —

भर्तृहरि Author of the three Śatakas and of the Vākya-padiya. Mr. Telang gives it as his opinion that he must have flourished about the close of the first and the beginning of the second century of the Christian era. Tradition makes him brother of King Vikrama, and if this Vikrama be accepted as the same who defeated the Mlechhas in 544 A. D. we must suppose Bhartrihari to have flourished in the latter half of the sixth century.

* See Prof Tawney's Two Centuries of Bhartrihari, p. IX

† See Prof Tawney's Two Centuries of Bhartrihari p. 60

15 Prof Wilson (in his Vishnû Purâna) elaborately argues that the earliest of the Purânas cannot have been written long before the 8th. or 9th. century of the Christian era As Bhartrihari clearly mentions the Purânas in stanza 79 of the Vaiâgya Śataka, we are to infer that he must, therefore, be later than the 8th. or 9th. century A D *

(B) TRANSLATORS &C.

The first translation of Bhartrihari's Śatakas into any European tongue was that by a Christian missionary Abraham Roger who published in 1651 A. D. "A History of the Religion of the Brahmans" in which were contained two hundred proverbs of the sage Bhartrihari, translated into Dutch The stanzas on Nîti were styled by him as " the reasonable conduct of men," and those on Vaiâgya as "the road which leads to heaven."

This work was subsequently translated into French in 1670. A. D

Prof Tawney says that the Centuries of Bhartrihari are also contained in the Sanskrit Anthology of Haeberlin M Galanos translated the Nîti and Vaiâgya-Śatakas into Greek

° In order to refute this theory, we have to state that Shankarachârya, who is generally and rightly acknowledged to have flourished in the 8th century A D, has actually quoted the Puranas in his commentary on the 'Shvetâshvatara Upanishada' Besides this, the Puranas in general and the 'Vâyu-purana' in particular, are even referred to by Bânabhatta (बाणभट्ट) in his famous work "Kadambari" (कादम्बरी). Bana's age is now fixed about the beginning of the seventh century A D Prof Wilson's argument is therefore untenable

They were included by Prof Bohttingk in his "Indische Spruche St Petersburg, 1863-65 A. D.

They were translated into French by M. Hippolyte Fanche in 1852 and by M. Regnaud in 1875 A. D.

Vâman Pandit has translated the stanzas into Marathi

In 1795 A. D. H. H. the Mahârâj Sawâi Pratap Singhji of Jeypore translated the three Śatakas of Bhartihari into Bhâshâ verse, under the title of नीतिमंजरी, शृङ्गारमंजरी, and वैराग्यमंजरी chiefly consisting of the Chappaya (छप्पय) verses, which make the translation go by the popular name of Pratâpa Singhji's Chhappayas, ignoring altogether the few Sorathâs (सोरठा) and Dohâs (दोहा) which also form its part

One Pandit Rishabha Deva Śâstri of Jodhpore has recently translated the three Śatakas into Hindi. This book was published in 1894 A. D. by the Gyânsâgai Press Bombay

An anonymous translation of Bhartihari's Nîti and Vairâgya Śatakas into English prose was published in the Subôdha Prakâsh Press at Bombay. The book is entitled "The Proverbial Philosophy of Bhartihari"

Prof. Tawney has made an elegant vertical translation into English of the Nîti and Vairâgya Śatakas of Bhartihari. This book was published at Calcutta in 1877 A. D. under the title of "The Two Centuries of Bhartihari"

M. Durgâ Prasâd, Editor "Harbinger" of Lahore, has also translated in 1889 the aforesaid two Śatakas of Bhartihari into English prose. Both these Śatakas are published separately and called Maharâja Bhartrihari's Niti Śataka and Maharaja Bhartrihari's 100 couplets on Renunciation.

(C) BOOKS ABOUT BHARTRIHARI

Now we have come to that part which relates to those books which give us some account of Bhartrihari's life. Had we been fortunate in this we would not have much difficulty in affixing the chronology of Bhartrihari and giving an authentic record of his life on the authority of stubborn facts. But, to the great disappointment of all, our information in this respect is limited to two sources viz - (1) Bhartrihari Nirvedam "भर्तृहरिनिर्वेदम्" and (2) Bhartrihari's Khyalas (ख्याल)

(1) BHARTRIHARI NIRVEDAM (भर्तृहरिनिर्वेदम्).

It is a dramatical work in Sanskrit by Hariharopadhyaya (हरिहरोपाध्याय). Unfortunately, however, we do not know anything positively about Hariharopadhyaya's life except the fact of his being a Maithila Pandit. As for the full information of the work, we would here subjoin a clear and succinct synopsis of the Sanskrit play into English prose.

BHARTRIHARI-NIRVEDA NATAKAM

BY HARIHAROPADHYAYA.

Act. I

Bhartrihari meets his Râni Bhânnumati (रानीभानु- मती) after long separation, for which the latter expostulates with him, and the Râjâ makes some religious excuse for the prolonged absence from her. In the meantime, seeing a suttee mounting the blazing pyre of her dead husband, the Râjâ extols her conduct to the skies before the Râni; but she remarks that she does not see the propriety of a suttee's having recourse to real fire, when the fire of separation is quite sufficient to burn her immediately to ashes. Though a little incredulous, Bhartrihari then agrees with his Râni and takes his leave of her to go out shooting, to which she reluctantly and sorrowfully consents, on the condition of her being allowed to remain standing at the gate anxiously looking out the path of his speedy return.

Act. II

Opens with the dialogue of maid servants upon the sudden death of their Mistress (Râni Bhânumati), who, while standing at the gate, soon became lifeless on hearing the (false) news of Bhartrihari being slain by a tiger. The Râjâ, on his return to the Capital, finds the scene full of great sorrow and grief, and on knowing the corpse being taken to the crematorium hastens to that place and there mourns and weeps like a child and strictly forbids his men to set fire to the pyre on pain of precipitating himself into the burning logs.

Act III

Sorrowing over the corpse of his Râni, Bhartrihari sees at a distance that a Yogi is excessively weeping over the breakage of his earthen dish. The Râjâ goes to him and tries to pacify him by many wise counsels, but the Yogi is obdurate and goes extolling the virtues of his dish and bemoaning its irreparable loss more and more on account of his being himself the cause of its sudden destruction, for he dropped it down to test its strength. The plot of the dialogue is so framed that all the arguments put into the mouth of the Yogi are applicable even more strongly to the Râjâ for his grieving over Bhânumati's loss. Bhartrihari, though he recognizes all this in his heart, yet still persists in consoling the Yogi by alluding to the transitoriness of all things in the world and the futility of man's grief over what he has no control. The Yogi here assails the Râjâ with his own argument and observes —

परोपदेशे पाण्डित्यमिदम्मूढस्य गीयते
तमः समाश्रितस्येव दीपस्यान्यप्रकाशनम् ।

Being struck with the cogency of the remark Bhartrihari then recognizes the Yogi to be no other than Gorakshanath (गोरक्षनाथ) himself, and the latter acknowledges himself to be the same, and to have intentionally assumed the character in order to dispel the unavailing sorrow from the Râjâ's mind. Bhartrihari soon lays himself prostrate at his feet and requests from him the easiest road to self-knowledge and to this Gorakshnath thus replies:—

विषयेभ्यः समाहृत्य मनः शून्ये निवेशय ।
स्वयमानन्दमात्मानं स्वप्रकाशमुपैष्यसि ॥

Act IV

The primeminister is pleased to find the Râjâ joyfully sitting with the Yogi and then he ventures to ask his permission to cremate the corpse of Bhânumati. But strange to say that his master replies to have no concern with the world. Devatilak (देवतिलक), the minister, then remonstrates with him but to no purpose.

Act V.

Opens with the meeting of Bhartrihari with Bhānumati who is restored to life through the mystic powers of Gorakshanath. Bhānumati tries to embrace her husband but the Rājā runs and avoids her. She, thereupon, exerts her fair charms but in vain, and, failing in these, she resorts to the means of bringing her young son before the Rājā who is still indifferent to them.

The requests of the prime minister also prove fruitless. Gorakshanath then advises the minister to desist from his useless endeavours and to place the Rājakumara on the Gaddi for whose protection he will exert his own influence with that of the Rājā. He then consoles Bhanumati with the hope of again meeting (never to part from) her lord Bhartrihari after his obtaining immortality and here the play ends in happiness to all.

—oo—

The reader will see for himself how far the play coincides with our Bhartrihari's life in the beginning, and in what particular points it differs from it.

(2) BHARTRIHARI'S STREETS PLAYS OR MELODRAMAS.

These street plays are acted all over India and are very popular. They relate that King Bhartrihari was very fond of his wife Pingalā (पिङ्गला) He one day went shooting the wild deer and made his mark on a big buck. His does, thereupon, remonstrated with the Râjâ and entreated him to spare the buck and take instead the lives of as many of them as he pleases, because his death will make them all widows. But the Râjâ turned a deaf ear to these requests and shot the buck dead on the spot. The exasperated doe thereupon uttered a Shap (curse) against the Râjâ that the days of his Râjya are numbered, for he shall have soon to abdicate the kingdom and roam about in the forest as a hermit leaving his wives no better than widows. His meeting with Gorakhnath is then related at length and the Yogi after fully testing the veracity of the Râjâ's request, makes him his pupil. The plays also speak of Bhartrihari as a king and a brother of the celebrated Vikramâditya *.

European scholars will no doubt laugh that I make much of these trifling plays. But I would beg permission to remark that the fact of their having survived so long must be a sufficient guarantee of their being founded on authenticated historic and real life. A lie cannot last long. The remarkable incidents of Bhartrihari's life being framed into a play which is so popular with the general public speaks much of the high esteem and honor in which Bhartrihari is still held by them †.

—OO—

* The writer of these lines can himself attest to these vulgar plays being acted at many places in Rajputana as at Joypore, Jodhpore and Bikanir, generally during the months of the Spring.

† In the शनिकथा or शनिश्चरजीकी कथा, a poetical narration in vernacular of Vikrama's calamities, Bhartrihari is clearly and undoubtedly spoken of as the elder brother to Vikramaditya.

III .

As for the different works wherein the Ślōkas from Bhartrihari's Śatakas have been traced out, we would only beg to draw the reader's attention to their respective footnotes where full particulars have invariably been given of them. However, we have also thought it advisable to arrange them for brevity and clearness, sake, in a tabular form which will enable the reader to make a prompt and ready reference to them at a moment's time. It needs only be stated that the numbers given in this list will be found corresponding to those of the stanzas as arranged in the Nīti, Śringāra, and Vairāgya Śatakas of the present edition, and not to the numbers of the verses of the works or books to which they are traced.

43	Total Numbers							350

From this diagram it will be easily seen that we have traced out a large number (which amounts to no less than 350) of Bhartrihari's Ślōkas from these Śatakas to the 43 works enumerated above, where many of them have however figured more than once. Out of these books some have been unscrupulously acknowledged to be older than the 6th century of the Christian era. Taking the aforesaid 350 stanzas, we may safely point out that no less than 80 of them have expressly been quoted under Bhartrihari, 40 have been quoted under different authors and 137 have been quoted anonymously. Now, adding them together we get a total of 256 stanzas which are distinctly marked as quotations either from Bhartrihari or others; and thus there is left comparatively a very small number (viz 93) to be differently accounted, for Granting that the Astaratna, Gunaratna, Nītipradīpa, Panchatantra, Pancharatna, Bhōjaprabandha, Śāntīśataka, Śringāratilaka, Śringārambhu, Śādiratna, Saptaratna, Sūktāvalī and Hitōpadāśa are mere compilations and not genuine compositions of their several authors, and deducting the sum of 3, 1, 2, 21, 2, 3, 25, 1, 1, 1, 1, 8, and 12, (or 81) stanzas which occur respectively in them, we have now to face only an insignificantly small number of stanzas (viz 12), of which 1 is found in the Amarusataka, 1 in the Atmānuśāsanakāvya, 1 in the Chaturvargasangraha, 1 in the Chānakyaśataka, 2 in the Prabhōdhachandīōdaya, 1 in the Mahānātaka, 1 in the Mudiāīākśasa, 1 in the Mrichhakatika, 1 in the Vasīsthāsāra and 2 in the Varāgyaśataka (Padmānanda's). Amongst these twelve, 6 will be found to have been no other than those which have already been accounted for as quotations, and one as occurring twice, thus reducing the number ultimately to 4, of which 1 stands in the Prabôdhachandrôdaya, 2 in the Vairâgyaśataka of Padmânanda, and 1 in the Mṛichhakatika and Prabôdhachandrôdaya both Here I think we may conveniently drop this point without further comment

This line of argument will, it is hoped, furnish some clue to the solution of Bhartrihari's age, as well as to the conclusion of these Śatakas being considered a genuine composition or a mere compilation by Bhartrihari

To do full justice to the subject I cannot help bringing to the notice of the reader that leaving out the number of times a stanza has made its appearance in the foregoing table we may safely observe that out of the total of 326 stanzas as given in this edition no less than 182 have been found to exist in the 43 pieces enumerated above, and that of these 182 nearly 40 verses have figured from three to seven times in the diagram. This gives us a very distinct and indisputable proof of the proverbial and substantial popularity the Śatakas have so deservedly enjoyed from the very date of their production to the present day

IV SEQUEL.

After writing so much in the preceding portion of the Preface, it is not necessary to dwell at great length on giving out the conclusions we have arrived at, regarding the following questions of modern critics and scholars —

(1) Are the Śatakas either a mere collection of elegant extracts from several writers or a genuine composition by a single author?

(2) Who is the author of the Śatakas?

(3) What is the approximate date of the composition of this work?

(4) What other works are written by the author of the Śatakas?

(5) Was the author of the Śatakas himself a king and the brother of the celebrated Vikramāditya, the founder of the Samvat Era?

In answering these questions we would beg the reader's indulgence to condense our views in as small a space as possible, for everything is to be based on previous data which have already been given in full

(1) From the appearance of several Ślokas in many of the current Sanskrit works it is argued that the Śatakas are a mere collection of elegant extracts from numerous authors. But if we study the point a little carefully we will find that most of the works in which they are met with are in themselves mere collections and not compositions e g the Pancharatna, Śadratna, Saptaratna, Ashtaratna, Hitôpadeśa, &c. &c. Whereas in others as काव्यानुशसनं, काव्यप्रदीपः, काव्यालङ्कारः, सुभाषितावलिः, शार्ङ्गधरपद्धतिः &c &c the Ślokas are merely quoted either anonymously or as Bhartrihari's or as some others' Again, there are a few, very few, say some twelve Ślokas, which are found in works like the Amarusataka, Mudîârâksasa

&c These may harmlessly be considered as interpolations either in the Śātakas or in the works themselves Besides, there is a certain threadlike thought which pervades them all and unites them into one whole We are therefore in a position to say that the Śātakas are a genuine work from the pen of some particular person *

(2) Having thus decided the first question, it is not very difficult to arrive at a definite conclusion upon the authorship of the Śātakas When men like the authors of ‘दशरूपावलोकः’ [२७ नीति०] (composed in the time of मुञ्ज uncle to राजाभोज), “ सुवृत्ततिलकम् ” [२२ वैराग्य ०, ५२ शृंगार ०] (composed about the middle of the 11th century A D), “ उदाहरण-चन्द्रिका ” [७१ वैराग्य०] and others have quoted some of the stanzas from these Śātakas distinctly as Bhartrihari’s, it is mere childlike obstinacy still to question the authorship of Bhartrihari, because besides their extensive knowledge of Sanskrit Literature and the wide range of their information, they were unquestionably nearer than we to the author of the Śātakas by many centuries, the difference between us and him being undoubtedly less nearly by 8 centuries in the case of the authors of Dasarūpāvaloka and Suvrittatilaka It is therefore proved beyond controversy, that Bhartrihari is the author of these Śātakas

(3) To give a precise answer to the third question is noway easy But from a careful examination of the facts before us we shall try to fix the date

* For further discussion on this point see Preface I (C) and III of these Śatakas as accurately as possible Referring to the diagram put forward in Part III of this preface we are able to assert that many stanzas from these Śatakas are found quoted in the works of (1) Abhinavagupta (ध्वन्यालोकटीका), (2) Keśawamiśra (अलङ्कारशेखरः), (3) Ruyyānaka (अलङ्कारसर्वस्वम्), (4) Vaidyanātha (उदाहरणचंद्रिका), (5) Kśemendra (औचित्यविचारचर्चा, कविकण्ठाभरणम्, and सुवृत्ततिलकम्), (6) Mammata (काव्यप्रकाशः), (7) Gōvin-da (काव्यप्रदीप), (8) Vāgbhatta (काव्यनुशासनम्), (9) Namisādhu (काव्यालङ्कारटीका), (10) Appayadīxita (कुवलयानन्दः), (11) Dhananjaya (दशरूपावलोकः), (12) Anandavardhana (ध्वन्यालोकः), (13) Viśnu Śarma (पञ्चतन्त्रम्), (14) Ballāla (भोजप्रबन्धः), (15) Śivaraīma (रसरत्नहारः), (16) Śārṅgahara (शार्ङ्गधरपद्धतिः), (17) Bhōjarāja (सरस्वतीकण्ठाभरणम्), (18) Vallabha-deva (सुभाषितावलिः), (19) Jalhana (सूक्तिमुक्तावलिः) and (20) Nārāyana [हितोपदेश.] Of these authors Abhinavagupta flourished towards the end of the tenth, Kśemendra and Namisādhu in the middle of the eleventh, Dhananjaya in the tenth, Anandavardhana in the ninth and Bhōjarāja in the eleventh centuries of the Christian era Excepting Viśnu Śarmā and Nārāyana the remaining writers are comparatively later in age than these Anandavardhana is the oldest among them and besides quoting stanza 6 (शृ०) he even mentions भर्तृहरि by name This enables us to put the date of the Śatakas before भानन्दवर्धन, the author of ध्वन्यालोक 1 e before the second half of the ninth century, because it is demonstrated that Ananda-wardhana flourished during the reign of King Avantivarman (855-884 A D) Of the two writers mentioned above Viśnu Śarma is universally acknowledged to be much older than Nāîāyana, and we shall therefore confine our remarks to him 1 e विष्णुशर्मा. As we find no less than 21 stanzas from these Śatakas in the Panchatantra, we cannot help concluding the date of the Śatakas to be older than that of the Panchatantra Now if we succeed in fixing the date of the Panchatantra we shall at least be able to say something precisely about the chronology of the Śatakas

• See ध्वन्यालोक, p 47 (Kavyamala Series Bombay)

The Panchatantra quotes copiously from the Mahābhārata, Kāmandakīyanîtisāra, Manusmṛiti, Rāmāyana and Chānakya There are also two Ślōkas in it (III 27, and V 14) which can respectively be traced to the Śisupālabadha and Nāgānanda both of which are generally acknowledged to be later than the date usually assigned to the Panchatantra Besides naming Manu, Vrihaspati, Vyāsa, Vālmiki, Bhṛigu and Vātsyāyana, the Panchatantra also mentions Chānakya (I p 2, l 1) and Varāhamihira (I p 43, l 12), writers whose dates are pretty accurately known to us

Of the two Ślōkas, one traceable to the Śisupālabadha and the other to the Nāgānanda, we can easily dispose by thinking them either as later interpolations in the Panchatantra or as unconscious plagiarisms in the Śisupālabadha and the Nāgānanda

Chānakya as is well known was the friend, guide and political adviser of the adventurous Chandragupta, the contemporary of Selukus, and so he must be placed somewhere about 325 B C * Consequently there is nothing strange in the allusion of Chânakya's Arthasâstra in the Panchatantra † But Varâhamihira's date is unanimously accepted as the sixth century of the Christian era Here then lies the great difficulty we have to confront about the settlement of Panchatantra's date ‡ However taking it for a historical fact of reliable authenticity that Panchatantra is the original which was translated by "Buzerchemher, the chief physician and afterwards Vizier of the great Anushirwân (as Sir William Jones remarked at a meeting of the Society of the Asiatic Researches on the 26th February 1876) we cannot help removing the date of the Panchatantra to a time long before the reign of that illustrious monarch, and thinking the mention of Varâhamihira in it to be a mere interpolation by some later copyist of the work Panchatantra's date is therefore to be placed somewhere between that of Chânakya and that of Anushirwân or roughly speaking between 325 B C. and 530 A C But as we learn from the pre-

* See Hunter's Brief History of the Indian People pp 76 and 77

† " ततो धर्मशास्त्राणि मन्वादी न्यर्थशास्त्राणि चाणक्यादीनि" (पंचतत्रम् । काव्यमुख)

‡ According to the authority of the learned editors of the काव्यमाला Panchatantra cannot be older than 750 A D, because it quotes the Sloka पर्यङ्गैस्त्वरणं &c (Panchatantra I 174) from the Kuttanîmata of Damodaragupta, the prime minister of King Jayâpida (755-786 A D) See footnote at p 111 of काव्यमालागुच्छक No 3

face of its first foreign translation that the work was rendered into that language after its obtaining a world-wide reputation, we cannot be far from right to allow about three centuries' time for the spread of its fame in those old days (bearing it in mind that the Indian princes in whose court the Panchatantra had secured for itself a very exalted position of rank and honour, took the greatest possible care to conceal this rare gem from the foreigners) This will further push on the date of Panchatantra's composition to somewhere about the second century of the Christian era

As we find the 134th verse of the Panchatantra, book II, expressly assigned to Vikramāditya (विक्रमादित्य)—whom tradition makes younger brother of Bhartrihari (भरद्वाज)—in the Śringadhara-paddhati of Śringadhara, at No 277, and the Subhāsitāvalī of Vallabhadeva, at No 507, and as there are no less than twenty-one stanzas from these Śatakas to be found in the Panchatantra, we can fairly infer that the author of the Śatakas lived a century or two earlier than Viśnu Śarmā the author of the Panchatantra This will go to prove the truth of the traditional history of Bhartrihari as given in the beginning of our preface

(4) Three works are attributed to Bhartrihari Of these we take the Satakas first of which we have acknowledged him to be the undisputed author

The second work generally ascribed to him is the वाक्यपदीय. But to my mind the identity rests merely on name Nothing about the parentage or literary work of Bhartrihari is told either in the वाक्यपदीय or the Satakas So we are not authorized by facts to think Bhartrihari to be the author of the वाक्यपदीय But the authority of tradition here countenances the identity of हरि of the वाक्यपदीय and Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि) of the Satakas and we may do well to bow submissively to it until we are able to set it aside by satisfactory evidence of facts and figures

The third work which tradition assigns to Bhartrihari is the भट्टिकाव्य.

But it has been already proved above in connection with the first and second parts of our Preface that the author of भट्टिकाव्य is a distinct personage from Bhartrihari Bhattikavyam is proved to have been composed in the 6th or 7th century A. D. (See Weber's Sanskrit Literature p 196 note)

(5)—There is no internal evidence to prove that Bhartrihari was himself a king and a brother of Vikramāditya We have no authentic record about Vikramāditya, the founder of the Samvat Era, being the younger brother of Bhartrihari. Bhartrihari himself does not say anything about it The tradition is not corroborated by any reliable external evidence of unquestionable authority Of course we learn from the Satakas that, if not himself a king, Bhartrihari is quite at home and well conversant with courtlife Bhartrihari is no doubt spoken of as King in the भर्तृहरि-निर्वेदनाटक The several street plays (ख्याल) on भर्तृहरि and गोपीचन्द also speak of Bhartrihari as Maternal uncle to गोपीचन्द and brother to विक्रमादित्य and मैनावति mother of Gôpîchanda

From what has been said above we may take it as pretty certain that Bhartrihari is the author of the Śatakas and that his precise date, though involved in mystery, is believed to be about 50 or 60 A D. From a careful study of the Śatakas we can also infer that he is a poet of no ordinary stamp, that he is quite at home in the delineation of Nīti, Śringāra and Varāgya and therefore one who must have actually tasted the fruits of all three, and that from his frequent reference to kings, kings' surroundings and king-ly enjoyments, he must have been, if not a king himself, one thoroughly conversant with a king's state and life.

I cannot, before concluding this part of my Preface, help adducing some plea for the acceptance of Bhartrihari's tradition. When real authority is wanting, a people may justly be pardoned for accepting a tradition which has long been handed down from generation to generation, spreading over many centuries say 18 or 19, and which has not been thoroughly destroyed by the canons of Western criticism. Putting aside the inconclusive theories of many a learned scholar who have written on or of Bhartrihari, we may, therefore, be justified in heading the Preface with the traditional history of Bhartrihari, adhering, though not quite wholly and without reserve, to what is preserved in men's minds about the writer of these Śatakas on Nīti, Śringāra and Varāgya.

Such places are numerous and spread all over India. We shall, however, confine ourselves to the description of those we have seen ourselves or read about in any reliable work.

(1). "Bhartrihari Gupha." A cave at Ujjen having within its centre a small altar at which Bhartrihari is said to have made his daily offerings, lighted his sacrificial fire and kindled his Dhoom. It is also told that a subterranean passage which formerly connected this cave with Benares is now blocked up. *

(2). "Bhartrihari's Gupha at Mount Abu." On Mount Abu there are two caves pointed out as Bhartrihari's. One is by the old footpath to Basishtâshrama or Gaumukha which passes close to the Railway School leaving it on the left. A stream of water runs down the small rock in the rains. One of the apertures in the recess of the cave is supposed to be subterraneously running as far as Kâshi. It is all dark within and nothing can however be positively ascertained about the subterraneous passage. But here I would beg permission to remark that such legends are quite common with many a cave of renowned sages and Yogis throughout the land.

The other cave which is also spoken of as Bhartrihari's is on a hill on the left side of the Achaleswar Mandir (अचलेश्वर मंदिर) at Achalgarh. It is something like a proper Ashrama with one or two ragged kuchha sheds to give shelter to the resident Jogis who live there. These men always keep a smoking fire or Dhooni (धूनी) continually burning in one place which is said to be the case from the time of Bhartrihari downwards. They wear red or reddish (गेरुवा) clothes and keep no wives and profess themselves to be the followers of the royal ascetic Bhartrihari.

(3) "Raja Bhartriharika Mahal" It is situated to the North of Schwan, a town on the right bank of the Indus and belonging to Hyderabad (Sind). The palace of Bhartrihari, as it is called up to date, is still to be seen in the centre of a very ancient and extensive fortress where Bhartrihari is said to have reigned when he was driven from Ujjein by his younger brother Vikramâditya *.

(4) "Bhartrihari's Mandir" A temple to the south of Schwan which is held sacred both by the Hindus and Mohammedans †.

(5) "Bharilewar" A town belonging to the Chief of Kânorh, one of the sixteen great Barons of Meywar. It boasts of a high antiquity, and Bhartrihari the elder brother of Vikramâditya is said to be its reputed founder ‡.

(6) "Bhartrihari's Samadhsthânas" They are found in many places, but we shall enumerate those only to which we have been eyewitness

was also told by the Jogi that there is no specified time for Bhartrihari's Samâdhi-taking. He comes here when he likes incognito, but when he takes the Samâdhi, Bhartrihari reveals himself in his true garb.

Needless to add that 'Samâdhi-taking' is here used in the sense of burying oneself alive. When a yogi takes Samâdhi, he is generally buried underground and a dome is raised on the spot to mark the event, but it is not unusual that he is again seen on the earth through his mystic powers of Yoga.

(b)—Another Samâdhisthâna of Bhartrihari is still pointed out at Châksû in Jeypore some 25 miles south of the Capital. Besides a cave and a yogi's shed and a Mamuli account of Bhartrihari's Samâdhi-taking at the place, there is nothing particular about it.

Apropos, I may also state that there exists a sect of Yogis who hold Bhartrihari in very high esteem and call themselves as 'भरतरी' or the followers of Raja Bhartrihari. I hear that annual fairs in honor of the royal ascetic Bhartrihari are held at many places in India and they are frequented by numerous crowds of men and women of all castes and creeds. Bhartrihari is said to be immortal and believed now and then to appear to those pious Yogis who have renounced the world in right earnest.

Perhaps it will not be out of place to tell something about Gorakshanath (गोरक्षनाथ), the spiritual Gurû of Bhartrihari. He is acknowledged to be one of the नवनाथ 'Nine Nâthas' or nine great Yogis who are masters of the Yogâsâtra and who can reveal its wondrous secrets to whomsoever they please. Some strange books, like the 'गोरक्षपद्धति' are attributed to Gorakshanāth. The Great Yogi is immortalized by the Guikhas who hold him in great respect and reverence. The town of Gorakhpore some 55 miles west of Khatmandu (Nepal) is also called after the name of the reverend Yogi. In this town there is a cave known as Gorakhnatha's in which the great ascetic is said to have attained salvation.

VI. A PLEA FOR THE PRESENT EDITION.

It was in June 1893, that a friend of mine who had come up Mount Abu on some business and put up with me in the Jcypore House, thus remarked to me in a friendly chat we were enjoying together in the cool evening "I see that you are very light of work. Please not to while away your time in idle pursuits and useless reading, but write out something which may do good to all of us. I could not deny the comparative ease of my position and the earnestness with which the remark was made, led me to beg his excuse for my inability to put my hands to any serious useful composition. But my esteemed friend was not a man to be easily put aside and he pressed me to give him a pledge of acting up to his counsel which was reluctantly accorded, but without the least idea of ever fulfilling the same. To render the 'Three

< The nine Master Yogis as enumerated in the हठयोगप्रदीपिका are

Centuries of Bhartrihari" into English was his suggestion, and I gladly took the hint. Though I had not, as already noted, the least idea of keeping my word, still the auspicious moment in which the pledge was given led me on to set about the work in real earnest. The greater was my advance in the self-imposed task, the more hopeful became the prospect. At last the translation was finished. I wrote to the energetic Secretary of the Bombay Theosophical Society for its publication, who undertook to do it on condition of the manuscript being approved by his European brothers. Consequently, the translation of the Vairāgya Śataka was sent him about the month of November. But the manuscript was kindly returned by him after a few days together with a printed pamphlet entitled the 'Proverbial Philosophy of Bhartrihari' and a paper bearing the autograph note of Col. Olcott to whom the manuscript and pamphlet were submitted for inspection. On reading the paper I found that the learned President of the Theosophical Society had remarked that both these needed corrections of idiom, the Pamphlet very much, the manuscript very little, and that he had no time to take it up for the present. Instead of being dejected by these remarks, I was very much gratified to see my first attempt being very near the point of being approved by the redoubtable head of the Theosophical Society. Besides, a close comparison of my translation with the Pamphlet soon dispelled my fears and filled my heart with great delight. By the way, I may here state that up to that date I had never dreamt of any existing English Translation of Bhartrihari. From that time downwards I gave myself heart and soul to bring my translation to the necessary perfection by availing myself of the many books on and relating to Bhartrihari. It may also be stated that this translation was submitted for his perusal to Col G. H. Trevor C. S. I., the then enlightened Agent to the Governor General for the States of Rajputana, in the beginning of March 1895. After going through a considerable portion of the Nīśataka he returned it with thanks and evinced his full sympathy and approbation of the undertaking.

H. H., the Maharajadhiraj Sawai Pratap Singh's translation is in Hindi Poetry : Dohās, Sorathās and Chhappayās. It consists of three chapters on Nīti, Śingāra and Vairāgya, and is very terse and pithy and hence difficult to grasp for an ordinary reader.

The Hindi prose Translation of the Śatakas by Pandit Rishabha Dutt Śāstri of Jodhpore is neither correct nor good.

I have, therefore, thought it advisable to give here a correct translation in Hindi prose of the day which will be found quite easy, clear and idiomatic.

As for English Translations of the work I have before me the following —

(I) The Proverbial Philosophy of Bhartrihari anonymous

(II) The Two Centuries of Bhartrihari Prof. Lawney.

(III) Bhartrihari's Nīśataka and Vairāgya Śataka, translated into English by Mr. Durgā Prāsād of Lahore.

I After the remarks of Col Olcott it is needless to dwell more upon the merits of the first It contains only the two Śatakas of Nīti and Vairāgya

II Prof Tawney's is no doubt a very splendid and elegant translation But as it is in verse, it is either more or less than the original Moreover there are to be found only the Nīti and Vairāgya Śatakas and the Śringāra chapter is quite left out in the edition

III It (Mr Durgā Prasad's translation) is of course better than the Proverbial Philosophy of Bhatṛihai, but it is not quite up to the point In this, too, the Śringāra Śataka is also wanting

From these remarks it will not be quite difficult to see that the present edition is to fill up a necessary gap regarding the Śatakas of Bhatṛihai Besides a large number of copious notes (both critical and explanatory) at the end of the volume, the original Sanskrit Text being immediately followed by Hindi and English translations, and a variety of citations of parallel passages from Sanskrit and English authors, constitute a novel feature of the present edition An English translation of the Śringāra Śataka is, I think, here presented for the first time to the public There being really nothing which can properly be called obscene and immoral. I do not think that any apology is needed for the insertion of the Śringāra Śataka On the contrary the stanzas are to be found comparatively quite decent and innocent by the side of a number of novels and amorous poems in English Moreover, if rightly understood almost all the strophes of the Śringâra Śâtaka are intentionally composed to divert our attention from the baneful influence of women in particular and worldly enjoyments in general. So, if we are to leave out the noble thoughts of the Śringâra Śâtaka, we commit a great mistake in bringing out a very poor picture of the author's exalted and praiseworthy aim in the composition of this work.

In numbering the stanzas of the Niti and Vanâgya Śâtakas, I have generally followed the Nirṇaya Sâgara (Bombay) Edition of Bhartṛihari's Śâtakatrâyam, but in that of the Śringâra Śâtaka the plan adopted is mostly consistent with the Gyâna Sâgara Press Edition of Bhartṛihari's Śâtakatrâyam.

As for the Table of Contents I have stuck to no particular copy or copies of the work but keeping in view almost all of them, I have independently worked out quite a new arrangement of the subjects from a careful study of the text. To make the edition as useful as possible, I have also appended to it an alphabetical list of all the ślôkas of these Śâtakas. A full list of works and authors referred to in the compilation of this book is also to be found in the present volume.

In the end I may remark, with Prof Tawney that " translations are seldom popular either in prose or verse unless they depart widely from the spirit of the original. But a certain measure of fidelity to the original, even at the risk of making oneself ridiculous is better than the studied dishonesty which characterises so many translations of oriental poets "

On the whole it can be safely said that if perused with care and attention the book will no doubt be found to be a very interesting and instructive reading. However, it being only the first juvenile attempt in the field of literary composition, the present volume cannot naturally be expected to be entirely free from all sorts of faults and drawbacks, but the reception accorded to it by the reading public and the impartial judgment passed on its merits and demerits by learned critics will ultimately decide whether the couple of years of hard labour and persevering industry spent in bringing it out have been well spent or not and whether any other essay can again be usefully and successfully made in this direction by its amateur editor.

Before concluding I may be permitted to pay my cordial and grateful thanks to those of my friends who have helped me any way by their valuable suggestions and appropriate encouragements not to give up the undertaking nor to do it halfheartedly and imperfectly but to carry it through to the best of my ability and power.

ONE HUNDRED STANZAS ON NĪTI

Bow to the calm and self-luminous Being whose image is entirely free from (or undefined by) the limits of Space, Time, &c, and is, therefore, Infinite; and whose existence is only experienced by one's own conscience or whose sole (principal) essence is self-knowledge !

This stanza which is quoted under Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि) in Ballabhaddeva's Subhāshitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि) at No 3 (Bombay Sanskrit Series XXXI) also forms the opening Sloka of the Vasīsthāsāra (वसिष्ठसार)

यां चिन्तयामि सततं मयि सा विरक्ता साऽप्यन्यमिच्छति जनं स जनोऽन्यसक्तः ।
 अस्मत्कृते च परितुष्यति काचिदन्या
 धित्तां च तं च मदनं च इमां च मां च ॥ २ ॥

मैं जिसका निरन्तर चिन्तन करता हूँ वह मुझको नहीं चाहती किन्तु वह किसी अन्यपुरुषसे प्यार करती है; और खेदका विषय है कि यह पुरुष किसी दूसरीही स्त्रीपर आसक्त हो रहा है। इसही तरह कोई ऐसी स्त्री भी विद्यमान है जो हमसे बहुतही प्रसन्न है। ऐसी दशामें इस स्त्रीको, प्यारीके जारपुरुषको, प्यारीको, मुझको, और कामदेवको अत्यन्त धिक्कार है ॥ २ ॥

. She of whom I always think is indifferent to me, but on the contrary, she likes another man who in his turn, is attached to a different woman. Again there is some one else who takes much delight in me. With these facts before us, we cannot help calling shame and censure upon her (the woman who loves me), him (my love's paramour), my love, myself and Cupid (the real author of all these evils)

Bharbhari (भर्तृहरि) is here said to allude to the infidelity of his wife. See Note to this stanza.

This Sloka (श्लोक) is quoted anonymously by Sindhavaman in his commentary on Vagbhattalanāra (वाग्भटालङ्कार)

अज्ञःसुखमाराध्यःसुखतरमाराध्यते विशेषज्ञः ।

ष्यको प्रसन्न करनेके लिए स्वयं ब्रह्माजीभी असमर्थहैं ॥३॥

To manage (coniliate) an ignorant person is quite easy, and easier still is the propitiation of the learned, but to please the conceited fellow whose head is turned by his little learning is surely an impossible task even for Brahmá, the Creator

The best means (silence) by which ignorance can be concealed from the sight of others has been graciously left by God in the personal control of man who can use it as he pleases. Silence is an ornament of the illiterate, especially in the assembly of learned (all-knowing) people.

Just as a dog is not ashamed of being seen by India, the lord of gods, when it is bent on joyfully eating a putrid and fleshless piece of human bone full of worms and saliva, and devoid of all juice and taste, so a mean fellow is never ashamed of accepting another's worthless favour, charity, or munificence

PURPORT

No pursuit is ever considered as dishonest and derogatory by the mean.

This stanza is same as stanza 8 in Sāntasāla Part II (शान्तिशतक द्वितीयपरिच्छेद)

अत्यन्त विरस though not exactly equivalent to निरुपमरस of the text gives approximately the same idea

Those who have unfortunately lost the power of discerning right from wrong are sure to suffer a thousand falls like those of the Ganges that first falls from the heights of heaven upon the head of Shiva, and thence upon the lofty summits of the Himālaya, from which it again flows down to the plains below, and then empties its waters into the sea, being thus obliged to fall to the lowest level by gradual descent,

For the varied courses of the heavenly river—the Ganges—see our Notes on this stanza. One of the Sanskrit names of the Ganges (गंगा) is Tripatāṅgā (त्रिपथगा) which means a river of three different paths or courses.

This stanza is same as stanza 5 in the Pancharatna (पंचरत्न) It is also quoted anonymously in the Subhāshitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि)
(No 2943 B S S No XXXI) The verse also occurs in the *Sūl-

जिस मनुष्यको साहित्य और संगीतशास्त्रका कुछभी ज्ञान नहींहै वह निस्संदेह पुच्छ और शृंगरहित पशु है । तृणादि भक्षणकरनेके विना उसका जीवित रहनाभी पशुओंकासौभाग्य सूचित करताहै; क्योंकि यदि उसका जीवनभी घासपरही निर्भर होता तो पशुओंको अपनी उदरपूरणा-करनेमें बहुतही कठिनता होजाती ॥ १२ ॥

One who is ignorant of literature and music is undoubtedly a tailless and hornless beast, and the fact of his being accustomed to live without grass affords a fortunate advantage to cattle that are thus secured to make a free use of their natural food

The latter half of this Śloka—one of the most important sayings of Bhartrihari—is often misinterpreted by commentators and translators. It is easy to see how much force it loses, and how nonsensical it becomes by the interpretation which renders it thus “Lower animals can subsist without grazing on grass, and so they too are even better off than men.”

येषां न विद्या न तपो न दानं

 श्रवणही किया है, न दानही दिया है, न ज्ञानही संपादन
 किया है, न सुशीलहीका आचरण किया है, न गुणोपा-
 र्जनही किया है और न धर्मानुष्ठानही किया है, वह इस
 मर्त्यलोकमें केवल आकृतिमात्रसे मनुष्य कहलाते हैं;
 परंतु वास्तवमें वह साधारण मृगोंकी भांति पृथ्वी- माताके वृथाभाररूप हैं ॥ १३ ॥

Those who have neither learning, nor devotion, nor charity, nor spiritual knowledge, nor good conduct, nor morality, nor religious faith are nothing less than mere useless burdens to mother earth, wandering over this mortal world like the wild deer in a human form.

Prof Tawney cites a striking parallel to this stanza from the Iliad
 See Tawney's Two Centuries of Bharatiani, p 6

The verse stands in the Sūktāvalī (सूक्तावलि 1८)

The point of the stanza seems to be that a man to prove his superiority to animals must give himself to learning, devotion, &c, &c

वरं पर्वतदुर्गेषु भ्रान्तं वनचरैः सह ।
न मूर्खजनसम्पर्कः सुरेन्द्रभवनेष्वपि ॥१४॥

व्याघ्रादि हिंसक जंतुओंके साथ दुर्गम पर्वत और विषम वनादिकमें भ्रमण करना तो फिरभी किसीप्रकार अच्छा है परंतु मूर्खजनका मिलाप तो इंद्रभवनमें भी श्रेष्ठ नहीं होता ॥ १४ ॥

Roaming with wild beasts in dense forests and mountains is surely to be preferred to the company of a fool though it may take place within the palatial premises of the mighty Indra, the lord of gods

It also stands in the Svītārāṭī (सूक्तावलि । २०)

Cf — “न स्थातव्यं न गन्तव्यं दुर्जनेन समं क्वचित् ।”

(हितोपदेश । ३ । २२)

In plain language the instruction conveyed by this stanza is that to live a poor and risky life is far better than to form an acquaintance of a fool. The temptation of a fool's friendship is invariably to be avoided at all costs and hazards.

The word पर्वतदुर्गेषु admits of two different interpretations (1) inaccessible mountains or (2) mountains and impassable lands, according to the two ways in which the word is compounded; i. e. either it is a तत्पुरुष or द्वन्द्व compound respectively.

जिस राजाके राज्यमें शास्त्रानुसार शुद्ध सुंदर भाषण करनेवाले और वेदादि विद्याओंके पढानेवाले सुप्रसिद्ध कविजन निर्धन होकर निवास करते हैं उसराजाके मूर्ख होनेमें किसीप्रकारकाभी संशय नहीं, क्योंकि जैसे बहु-मूल्य मणिका अल्पमूल्य अंकित करनेसे जौहरी ही कुपरीक्षक (या अनाड़ी) कहलाते हैं और मणिका वास्तवमें वही मूल्य बना रहता है वैसेही सत्कवियोंका निरादर करनेसेभी राजाहीकी मूर्खता प्रगट होती है, कवीश्वरोंका यथार्थमें कुछभी नहीं घटता क्यों कि वह तो धनादि न होनेपरभी प्रभावशाली हैं ॥ १५ ॥

The chief in whose territory the far-famed poets commanding a sweet and melodious speech satuated with deep learning of the shâstîâs, as well as a number of pupils of great erudition, cannot earn a substantial livelihood, and hence drag on a poor miserable life is indeed to be stamped a veritable fool. The poets though suffering from penury are still to be thought as men of influence and power in the world, for, it is the sad mistake of the unfortunate jewellers who are misled to undervalue the precious gems which do not thereby lose a bit of their real worth

Give up your vain pride, oh kings, before the learned and treat them fairly as your equals or even superiors, for, who can ever compete with those whose hidden wealth of knowledge is (1) beyond the power of thieves to steal, (2) always a source of indescribable happiness to them, (3) so strange that instead of being lessened by distribution among its seekers (i.e. the students) it, on the contrary, ever grows more and more, and (4) is never subject to ruin not even at the end of Kalpa i.e. on the day of universal destruction

प्राणीमात्र की हिंसा करनेसे निवृत्त रहना, दूसरोंका धन हरण करनेकी इच्छा न रखना, सत्य भाषण करना, समयानुसार श्रद्धापूर्वक दान देना, पराई स्त्रीकी चर्चा करने और सुननेसे दूर रहना, तृष्णारूपी नदीके प्रवाहको रोकना, गुरुजनोंके आगे विनय धारण करना, और सब जीवों पर दया करना सर्व साधारणके लिए सर्वशास्त्र-संमत कल्याणका मार्ग है ॥ २६ ॥

To avoid giving injury to living beings, to keep aloof from stealing the wealth of others, to tell the truth, to exercise due charity in time, to keep quiet on the gossips of others' wives, to confine the desire of gain within proper limits, to behave with meekness before the elders, and to show mercy and kindness to all creatures are unanimously enjoined by the Scriptures to be the one unerring road leading to all sorts of good and happiness

संसारमें (२) नीच, (२) मध्यम) और (३) उत्तम
ये तीन प्रकारके मनुष्य होते हैं, जिनमेंसे (१) नीच
मनुष्य तो आगन्तुक विघ्नोंके भयमात्रसे किसी कार्यका
प्रारम्भही नहीं करते, और (२) मध्यम प्रकारके मनुष्य
यद्यपि कामका समारम्भ तो करदेते हैं, किन्तु विक्षेप
होनेसे बीचहीमें अधूरा छोड़ देते हैं, परन्तु (३) उत्तम
मनुष्य ऐसे धैर्यवान् होते हैं कि बारंबार विघ्न सहन करने
पर भी अपने हाथमें लिए हुए कामको सम्पूर्ण किये विना

Bad men do not even begin a thing through fear of future obstacles, the mediocre after commencing it, give it up when they are confronted with real present evils; but good men never leave unfinished what they have once begun, notwithstanding the fact of their being repeatedly baffled and opposed

It is quite natural with good people to live upon their just earnings, never to do a sinful act not even at the time when there is a probability of losing their own lives, never to ask anything either from the evil or even from a poor friend short of money, to behave boldly and honourably in days of adversity, and always to follow the footsteps of the wise No one has ever dictated this hard Asidhārā vow to the good, but its keeping is quite natural to them

Can the lion, the foremost of the self-respecting and noble beings, who is always anxious to get a mouthful of the superb temples of wild elephants in puts so much degrade himself as even to condescend to feed upon dry grass although he is lean and weak by hunger as well as by age, almost powerless, in a very painful condition, devoid of splendour and energy, and apt to lose his very life failing to get a morsel of food ?

PURPORT A man of self-reliance and respect can never degrade himself to do a mean and disgraceful act notwithstanding his too severely straitened circumstances shadows that of its predecessor, reaching the culminating point in the last foot

For the son of the Himālayā when his father was subjected to the severities of India's angel, the cutting of his own sides (wings) by the heavy strokes

The net point of the stanza seems to be this a strong man of real worth cannot be expected to put up calmly with the insult of

In straitened circumstances a man is even anxious to collect the empty husks, but afterwards when he is master of enormous wealth he will attach no more importance to the whole earth than to a piece of dry straw. It is, therefore, quite clear that the value of a thing is altogether dependent upon the wealthy or penurious condition of man.

PURPORT.

Strictly speaking, things possess no absolute value in themselves, but they are valued more or less according to the straitened or affluent circumstances of their owners.

मनुष्य कुछ सुख नहीं पासकता ॥ ५९ ॥

भावार्थ ।

नीच जनकी सेवा कदापि सुखदायक नहीं होती ॥

No one can ever live with the least convenience and comfort in the service (lit sight) of a wicked person who has (1) proved himself to be the fruitful source of all evils, (2) set himself quite free from the bonds of morality, (3) added a great deal to the store of vices done in his previous existence, (4) found himself, by a special grace of good fortune, in a sudden turn of affluent circumstances, and (5) given various proofs of his bitter hatred of all kinds of merits.

PURPORT None can ever be happy in the service of an evil person.

Quoted anonymously in the Subhāshitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि), at No 444

For the point of the stanza, cf —

“The low-born wretch,
That from his mean degree rises at once
To unexpected riches, treats his slaves
With barbarous and unbounded insolence”

(The Plays of Aeschylus, p. 157).

मती च पश्चात् । दिनस्य पूर्वार्द्धपरार्द्धभिन्ना
छायेव मैत्री खलसज्जनानाम् ॥ ६० ॥

दुर्जनों की मित्रता दिनके पूर्वाधकी छायाके समान प्रारंभमें बड़ी फिर क्रमशः क्षयी होती है, परंतु सत्पुरुषों की मैत्री दिनके उत्तरार्द्धकी छायाके समान प्रारंभमें कम और फिर क्रमक्रमसे वृद्ध होनेवाली हुवा करती है ६०

The friendship of the wicked and the good is just like the changing shadow of the first and second halves of a day, for, in the former case it gradually diminishes from much to little whereas in the latter it grows from little to much

विपत्ति काल में धैर्य, ऐश्वर्य के समय में क्षमा, सभामें
वचन चातुरी, युद्ध में पराक्रम, सुयशमें प्रीति और
शास्त्र में व्यसन, महात्माओं के स्वाभाविक लक्षण हैं ॥६३॥

Fortitude in adversity, humbleness in prosperity, eloquence in council, bravery in war, strong desire for fame, and warm attachment to Śāstric learning, are the natural attributes of noble-minded (great-

Who has ever taught the good (1) to conceal their charity from the public, (2) to show due respect and hospitality to their guests, (3) to make no mention of the favours they have done to others, (4) to disclose to the world at large the obligations in which they have been placed by their fellowmen, (5) to feel no sort of pride in their being rich, and (6) to talk respectfully of others ?

A rain-drop if thrown upon a red-hot iron is even deprived of its own existence, whereas if it happens to fall upon the leaf of a lotus plant it soon assumes the appearance of a beautiful pearl, and the same is again turned into a real pearl if it chances to drop into the mouth of a seashell in the auspicious time of the Swāti star. It is therefore to be inferred that the bad, mediocre, and good attributes of a thing are always to be traced to the company it keeps

वही मित्र समझना चाहिये परंतु इन तीनों का लाभ
संसारमें विरले पुण्यवानोंकोही प्राप्त होता है ॥ ६८ ॥

The name of a son is only deserved by him who pleases his father by his good actions, that of a wife by her who is entirely bent on looking after the welfare of her husband, and that of a friend by him who is equally sincere in adversity and prosperity, but the enjoyment of these three gifts (i.e. an obedient son, a loving wife, and a sincere friend) is only granted to virtuous persons

When water was mixed with milk, the latter gave all its qualities to it. Consequently when water saw the distress of milk it began to burn itself. The sight of its friend's calamity much agitated milk and it went out of the pot to destroy itself on the burning embers. At this stage water came to its help and the milk soon became calm and cool. The friendship of the good is just like it.

For the general drift of the stanza, compare the noble lines of Dryden

I had a friend that lov'd me,
I was his soul, he liv'd not but in me,
We were so close within each other's breasts,
The rivets were not found that joined us fast
That does not reach us yet we were so mix'd,
As meeting streams, both to ourselves were lost
We were one mass, we could not give or take,
But from the same, for he was I, I He"

अहो ! समुद्रकी सहनशीलता और उदारताभी कैसी आश्चर्यजनक और विचित्र है कि जिसके अन्तर्गत एक स्थानमें शेषशायी विष्णु भगवान शयन करते हैं और दूसरे में उनके शत्रुगण दानवों का परिवार वर्तमान है । यहाँपर इंद्रवज्रसे पक्षच्छेदन होनेके भयसे शरणआए हुए पर्वत शयन करतेहैं और वहाँ पर प्रलयोत्पादक अग्निसमूह के सहित वडवानल विद्यमानहैं ७७ भावार्थ

The vastness, strength, and power of endurance of the ocean are truly wonderful as evidenced by the following fact Here in one place, sleeps into its bosom the god leshava and there in another are seen the entire family of the demons, the hereditary enemies of His race, here under its hospitable roof are lying the refugee mountains who have sought its shelter from the fear of Indra's thunderbolt, and there again we find the Badau & fine together with Sambataka, the fires of universal destruction

There can be no shadow of doubt that idleness is the greatest enemy of mankind sitting within their own bodies Industry is man's matchless friend as no one can ever have the least cause for repentance and misery by being active or industrious

To be idle is to be one's own enemy but to be active is equivalent to the possession of the best of friends

For the point of the stanza compare the well-known English proverb—

“ God helps those who help themselves ”

Though at first sight this will not appear an exact parallel to the text, yet a little reflection will convince a thoughtful reader of the precise similarity of the powerful thought of the above adage which lays it down that to be active is to secure the help of God, the best of friends.

देवतागण यद्यपि हमारे वन्दनीय हैं परंतु वह सब विधिके वशीभूतहैं, विधाताभी केवल प्रारब्धानुसार फल देताहै और यह फल मनुष्योंके पूर्व संचित शुभाशुभ कर्मानुसारही शुभाशुभ होतेहैं । इसलिए हमको उचित है कि देवता और विधाताको छोड़कर उन कर्मोंकोही प्रणाम करें कि जिनके प्रतिकूल विधाताभी कुछ नहीं करसकता ॥ ९४ ॥

We bow respectfully to gods, but alas ! they are all subject to Bidhi (Fate), who though worthy of worship is competent only to award according to a preordained destiny which is again the certain consequence of our own acts done in a series of former existences. We should, therefore, do well to give up our adorations for Gods and Fate, and take ourselves to the worship of our past actions over which Fate herself has not the least control.

Oh delicate lady! though thy person fully resembles a calm and contented Yogi by thy wellcombed hairs, large eyes, regular set of naturally clean teeth, and a couple of heaving breasts adorned with beautiful wreaths or necklaces of excellent pearls, it is still causing a great deal of internal disturbance in the midst of our hearts!

An ordinary English reader will not quite understand the exquisite beauty of this stanza as well as the reason which enables the poet to compare the person of women to that of Yogis. But a fair Sanskrit scholar will find no difficulty in tracing the secret to the double interpretations of the words सयमिन, श्रुते, द्विजानाम् and मुक्तानाम् which equally mean well-combed or self-denying, of the ear or the Sâstâs, of teeth or the twiceborn, and of pearls or emancipated souls. As the English tongue is here found to be incapable of such niceties of wordplay, the aforesaid words are above translated only in their former sense.

careful consideration of the Śâstîâs, at once make a candid and authentic (founded on authority) declaration, leaving aside your one-sided views or partiand take his abode into the caves of mountains, or should enjoy it in a right royal fashion and give himself up to the pleasures of lovely women with charming buttocks

चंद्रमाकी निर्मल चांदनी, मंदगामी सुगंधित पवन, और सुंदर महलकी छत, ये सब ग्रीष्म ऋतुमें आनंद
और कामदेव दोनोंहीकी वृद्धि करते हैं ॥ ३८ ॥

Hands of faneyed damsels dienched with the juice of pure sandal, houses furnished with artificial jets or fountains of water, flowers, moonlit nights, slow and sweet-scented breezes, and beautiful

लिपा पुता स्वच्छ महल, चंद्रमाकी निर्मल प्रकाश-मान चांदनी, प्राणप्यारीका मुखकमल, अत्यंत सुगंधित
 चंदनकी रज, और मनोहर पुष्पमाला कामी जनोके
 मनमें बहुत क्षोभ उत्पन्न कर सकते हैं परंतु विषय

A neat and clean house, the clear and refulgent moon, the lotus-like face of sweethearts, fragrant sandal dust, and charming garlands are able to cause a powerful storm into the hearts of the passionate ;
 but, on the contrary, they are quite helpless to produce the least effect upon the calm and serene temperament of those who have resolutely turned their faces from sensual pleasures

When we consider the point of the stanza we cannot fairly justify its place in the description of Summer. However, the poet seems apparently bent on bringing the cooling effects of cleanliness, moon, ladies, sandal and flowers to the notice of his readers

साथ की है । “ दीपितकामा, ” “ विकसितजातिः ” “पुण्यसुगन्धिः, ” और “ उन्नतपीनपयोधरभारा, ” तरुणी

Who is not delighted at the sight of the rainy season which like a youthful lady is quite capable of exciting men's passions by the fragrant odour of full-blown Jāti flowers and the thick gathering of rising clouds loaded with rains ?

In the following couplet we have got a very striking contrast to the idea of the text, for, here, the poet Vāḍhū (वृद्धि) compares the rainy season to an old woman

How can the mind of a wayfarer be not disturbed at the sight of his head being canopied with raining clouds, the sidelong hills being filled with peacocks dancing with pleasure, and the soil beneath his feet being covered with flowers and roots ?

With what great difficulty will, the days of women, with strong and beautiful eyelashes and wellversed in the art of sensual enjoyments, be passed at the time of separation from their loving husbands when their hearts are sorely pained with the fire of passion continually brightened at the sight of a brilliant flash of lightning in the sky, on the one side, and the odorous and fraught with the strong scent of Ketaki (केतकी) flowers, on the other, as well as of the roaring of raining clouds, in this place, and the passionate cries of peacocks in that?

Sensual pleasures are, no doubt, fruitless and a great hinderance to our renouncing the world. People may therefore hate them as they like, and stigmatise them as the source of all woe and misery. However, there is something very powerful and undefinable in their matchless might to cause a strong agitation even into the hearts of those who having forsaken mundane objects have entirely devoted themselves to the search of the First Principle or True Cause.

The idea of the stanza is a favourite point of oriental authors.
Cf —(a) “ यावद्विष्टिर्मुग्धाक्षीणा, नोनरीनर्तिभङ्गुरा, एष चेन्मनसि लब्धविपाक. , किं करिष्यति विवेकवराक. । ”

(भर्तृहरि निर्वेदम्)

There is also a couplet in Shikha Sâdi, the wellknown Persian poet, which may thus be translated in Hindi “विवेकियो के निर्मल प्रकाश का यश उसी समय तक रहता है जब तक वह स्त्रियों के चरित्रों से बचे रहे ।”

Men professing to be learned in the Sâstras, do not preach the doctrine of renouncement in real

That learned man, who preaches the doctrine of hate against young women is indeed a false philosopher who having first deceived himself is deceiving others, for, the enjoyment of Apsaras or heavenly nymphs is the ultimate end of heaven, which, in its own turn, is again the result of a series of religious devotions and virtues ✓ Quite true that there are men on this earth who are able to break into pieces the frontal heads of wild elephants, as well as some who are skilful to take out the life of lions, the cruel and dreadful lords of the deer, but I can safely assert before the courageous, that persons who can successfully brave the attacks of Cupid and subdue the passion of love are undoubtedly very few.

A man can walk in the path of righteousness, subdue his senses, preserve his modesty, and hold to his moral training, until his heart is not pierced by the stupifying arrows of women's glances shot off from their arched brows and blue eyelashes

भावार्थ

जैसे कोई राजा अपनी मुद्राके उल्लघन करनेवालोको उचित दंड देता है वैसेही कामदेव भी अपनी स्त्रीमुद्राके अनादर करनेवालोको नग्नी करणादि उचित दंड देता है ६४

The fools who have forsaken the great woman-seal of the god of love (who has the design of a fish emblazoned on his standard) which can bring them every kind of success in their various pursuits, are indeed devoid of all sense and wisdom, for, they have voluntarily given up the only source of all happiness in this world and are now wandering about in fruitless search of the same. But, see, that they have met adequate punishments at the hands of Cupid who has doomed some to roam about in the world with naked bodies, some with clean-shaven heads, some with bushy and shaggy hairs growing all over the body, some with twisted and matted locks and others with human skulls in their hands begging alms from door to door.

PURPORT

As kings punish those who disobey the royal seal so Cupid inflicts condign punishments on those men who set at naught his woman-seal

Who is it that has created the ambrosial poison of woman, the whirlpool of confusion, the home of immortality, the town of adventurous undertakings, the source of sin and crime, the embodiment of hundreds of deceits, the field of faithlessness, the barrier across the doors of heaven, the gate of the infernal city (hell), the magical basket of all illusionary tricks, and the one unfailing snare for enticing men ?

To tell the truth, the face of woman is not made up of moon, the eyes are not the embodiment of a pair of lotus flowers, and the body is not really constructed of gold, but foolish men being deceived by false exaggerations of poets are still led to devote a great deal of attention to females whose forms like those of all other beings are simply made up of skin, flesh, and bone

जैसे कमलिनी के पुष्प की स्वाभाविक लाली देख कर मूर्ख भ्रमर वृथाही आनंद मग्न हो उस के चारों ओर गूँजने लगता है, वैसेही लीलावती स्त्रियों के सहजविलासों को लखि कर मूढजन भी फूले अङ्ग नहीं समाते हैं ॥ ७८ ॥

Notwithstanding the fact that redness is merely a natural attribute of lotuses, the black bee is yet misled to take it for a sure sign of their love towards it, and so being mad with joy it hovers continually around the flowers, just in the same way, though amorous and graceful acts are quite natural with sportive women, yet they go to make indelible impressions upon the hearts of fools who take them for all in all as to their (women's) sincere attachment to them

The radical meaning of the word Shadangi (षडंगि) is six-footed. But the application of the word is confined to the bee

Flirtations are generally natural to the fair sex and we must not always take them for real love

After the lapse of that lovely period of youth, the same lotus-like face of slender-bodied women, which resembles to the splendour of a full moon, contains the ambrosia of lips, and is full of such excellent juice at the present time, will undoubtedly be deprived of all its flavour, and will begin to taste of bitter poison like the rotten fruit of a pomegranate

The simile may be extended to the regular set of teeth of a woman's mouth to the wellset seeds of a pomegranate fruit, both of which are seen to lose their charm when they are long past the period of maturity

No one can be said to be really loved by women, who talk with one, glance at another, and think of a different person, all at one and the same time.

PURPORT

Women are generally faithless and inconstant in love.

While the words of women are saturated with nectar their hearts are exclusively filled with poison. It is, therefore, quite reasonable that men should eagerly drink the lips of ladies with their mouths, and beat (rub) the breasts with their fists

Quoted under Kālidāsa Māgha (कालिदासमाघौ) in the Subhāshitāvali (सुभाषितावलि) at No 3380 Also found in the Panchatantra (पञ्चतन्त्र १ । १८९), the Kuralayānanda (कुवलयानन्द), and the Śringāravindu (शृङ्गारविन्दु),

How exquisitely the poet accounts for men's kissing women's lips and rubbing their breasts ! Is it not natural that one should eagerly advance towards the place which contains nectar so as to drink it off without delay ? Is it not that poison is a fit object of man's abhorrence, and does it not deserve a severe rubbing (beating) which contains the deadly bane ?

Makar ketana (मकरकेतन) or Cupid, the wonderful fisherman. has thrown his woman-net into the ocean of existence, and through the offer of a tempting bait of labial flesh he is soon able to drag out the human fish and then to roast him alive into the fire of passionate love

What a nice metaphor do we find here ? We have got the fisherman, his net, his hook, his bait and every-thing else ready for immediate use. Not content with all this he has also provided against the last chance of escape of the poor things by keeping at hand a burning fire in which he roasts the fishes caught by him. When once into the snares of love escape is out of question

What wise man can ever take delight in loving a prostitute—the mowing scythe of the heavenly creeper of knowledge—who, through the mere hope of getting a small amount of money, can even sell her lovely person to the disgusting embraces of a miserable creature that is born blind, ugly, worn out with age, rustic of low origin, and whose very sight is wholly unbearable on account of the stinking flow of his leprous scars ?

यह वेश्या सौंदर्यरूपी इंधनसे प्रज्वलित होनेवाली कामदेवरूप प्रचंड अग्नि है जिसमें कामीजन अपने यौवन और धन का निष्प्रयोजन हवन करते हैं ॥ ८९ ॥

A prostitute is the fire of love which strengthens through the fuel of beauty, and burns to ashes the youth and wealth of the libidinous

Besides its being identical in sense the following verse is almost alike with the above stanza in its verbal construction

“ अयं च सुरत ज्वाला, कामाग्निः प्रणयेन्धन ।

नराणां यत्र हूयन्ते, यौवनानि धनानि च ॥ ”

(सुभाषित रत्नभाण्डागारः)

आख्याना यौवनान्धानां वेश्या नामेह वेधसा ॥ ”

(कथासरित्सागरः । शशाङ्कवतीलवकः १ तरग.)

The poet's intention in the above stanza of the text is apparently to strike a successful blow at immorality by holding to decision the figure of a harlot in its darkest colours

के शराव (सरावा) रूप वेश्या के अधरोष्ठ का चुंबन अत्यंत मनोहर होने पर भी कोई कुलीन मनुष्य नहीं कर सकता ॥ ९० ॥

What respectable person can ever condescend to kiss the lips of a prostitute which though very lovely are in reality a disgusting tray or dish constantly spit by spies, soldiers (mercenaries), thieves, slaves, actors, and sensual cheats ?

The point of the stanza may be thus summarised —Prostitutes are generally enjoyed by the dregs and rubbish of mankind, and therefore they are not in the least the fit objects of social intercourse of the gentry

stanza

Those people are indeed blessed whose hearts are never agitated at the sight of beautiful ladies with (1) unsteady, big and large eyes, (2) youthful, lovely, thickset, and heaving breasts and (3) charming lines upon their tender abdomen

The word त्रिवली means threefolds. It is especially applied to the threefold wrinkles of skin just above the navel of healthy and wellformed women. The poet here speaks of them as creepers on account of their zigzag appearance.

Although she is herself the embodiment of nectar, and the engenderer of passionate love in the hearts of people the moon has yet availed herself of the happy opportunity of assuming the form of a big pearl to adorn the point of thy aquiline nose, and thus to drink off the ambrosia of thy lips in order to cure herself of her periodical wanings

Needless to say that the poet has here represented the pearl of a woman's nose-ring as a full moon drinking the ambrosia of her lips

The enjoyment of splendid palaces, graceful young ladies, and spotless wealth and power together with their necessary symbols can only last with the definite term of our past virtues ; for, when the influence of our previously accumulated good is no longer in force then all these gifts are soon scattered away and lost to the winds like a string of pearls broken in the course of an amorous quarrel.

A woman's glance is generally comparable to a wicked person; for, it attaches itself to those who have no control over their senses, diverts the concentration of mind, moves in a crooked path like a venomous snake, and maintains a proud and lofty bearing.

घर जाने की लालसा रखनेवाला पथिक, प्रस्थान समय में आकाश में उठी हुई नवीन मेघमाला की ओर दृष्टि करके यह तर्क करता है कि, यदि अबतक प्राणप्यारी जीवितही नहीं है तो मेरे वहां जाने से क्या प्रयोजन है और यदि वह जीवित भी है तोभी मेरा इस समय का प्रयाण तो सर्वथा निरर्थक है, क्योंकि यह घनघोर घटा मुझको सकुशल घर पर कब पहुँचने दे सकती है । इस प्रकार का तर्कवितर्क करके वह विचारा घर जाने का साहस कदापि नहीं करता ॥ ९६ ॥

Seeing the gathering of rain clouds just forming into the sky, a man who is away from his nativity is compelled to give up his immediate intention of returning home with the thought that (1) in case his beloved wife is already dead of the pangs of separation it is no advantage in his going there, or (2) if she be still surviving the shock it is also useless to undertake the journey when the monsoon is about to set in.

Before His marriage with Pârwati (पार्वती) Shiva succeeded in maintaining a complete indifference to the charms of women, and He went even so far as to reduce to ashes the god of love who had unfortunately once conspired with Spring to excite His latent passion ; but after His espousing that beautiful lady as the mistress of His heart, He became so much attached to her that He was unable to part with her even for the slightest moment, and to ensure this He assumed the wonderfully composite form which is half man and half woman. Shiva is therefore the only one who stands conspicuous both among (1) the worldlings and (2) the ascetics ; for once tasting the poisonous fire of Cupid's serpentine arrows, and always led astray by passionate lust, man is quite unable either to enjoy the sensual pleasures or abandon them altogether.

मुखपर जुंरियें पड़गई हैं, शिरके बाल श्वेत होगए हैं, और सारे अंग यद्यपि शिथिल होगए हैं, परंतु एक तृष्णा अब भी ज्यों की त्यों ही नहीं कितु प्रतिदिन तरुण होती strange to say, that the desire of gain is still acting as youthfully as ever

The same piece of cloud which covers the moon in night also covers the sun in day. What a great misfortune is it to which both the powerful luminaries are thus subjected ?

The meaning is How pitiable is the ^{misfortune of} pennurious condition of sun and moon who both cover themselves with the same piece of cloud respectively shading it in day and night !

चाहे कितने ही दिनतक क्यों न रहें विषयादि एक दिन अवश्य जानेवाले हैं इसलिए हम स्वयं उनका त्याग करें अथवा वह हमारा त्याग करें उनके हमारे वियोगमें तो किसी प्रकार का संशय नहीं, परंतु संसारी मनुष्य फिर भी स्वयं इनका परित्याग नहीं करते । जब अपनी इच्छासे विषयादि हमारा त्याग करते हैं तो हमारे मनको अत्यंत दुःख होता है परंतु जो हम स्वयं इनका परित्याग कर दें तो अनंत शांतिसुख का लाभ कर सकते हैं ॥ १६ ॥

To whatever length may sensual pleasures be ever prolonged, they are sure to end some day or other, then, how is it that men are not willing to give them up? When they go away themselves they are undoubtedly the cause of immense troubles to the mind, but when we can leave them of our own free will we may rest assured of reaping everlasting contentment and happiness from the noble step

When the bud of knowledge begins to blossom, and the rise of high aspirations and desire of gain are entirely sub-sided, we are sure to attain that sort of supreme contentment which is even coveted by Indra, the lord of gods, who, through advancement of age, has grown too much addicted to his love of wealth and livelihood

This stanza has been explained in different ways by different translators. But the text as it stands here cannot have another interpretation but that which we have given above

भिक्षाटन करके नीरस भोजनसे पेट पालन करते हैं और वह भी दिनमें एकही बार मिलता है, कोरी पृथ्वी पर शयन करते हैं, निज देह मात्र कोही अपना परिवार समझते हैं, और शतशः फटे पुराने टुकड़ों से बनी कंथा से शरीर को ढकते हैं, परंतु बड़े ही खेदका विषय है कि विषयवासना अब भी हमारा परित्याग नहीं करते ॥ १८ ॥

Though he has no other food than tasteless alms obtained only once a day, no other couch but the bare earth, no other dependents but his own body, and no other clothes than a wallet patched of hundreds of worn out rags, yet, alas ! he is not forsaken by worldly enjoyments !

It is quite true that a moth throws itself down into the burning flame of a lamp, and a fish devours the meat of deadly bait attached to the fishing-hook, but we must admit, that both the moth and the fish are entirely ignorant of the fact that this step of theirs will lead to their utter destruction. Whereas, on the contrary, we human beings cannot give up the temptations of sensual pleasures, notwithstanding the fact, that we are fully conscious of their being the inextricable snares of all our calamities and misfortunes in the world ! The influence of worldly delusion is, no doubt, tremendously great and mysterious !

ब्रह्मा जैसे उदार चित्त महात्माओंने इस जगतको उत्पन्न किया है, विष्णु जैसे महानुभावोंने धारण किया है, परशुराम जैसे शूरवीरोंने दिग्विजय करके तृण समान जानकर ब्राह्मणोंको दान करदिया है, और बलि राजा जैसे ऐश्वर्यवान अबभी इसके चतुर्दश भुवनोंके साम्राज्य का भोग कर रहे हैं । इस दशामें जो मनुष्य थोड़ेसे ग्रामों का राज्यलाभ करके इतना अभिमान करते हैं वह सर्वथा अनुचित है ॥ २२ ॥

When we see that there had been such magnanimous souls as Brahmâ who have created the world, others, as Vishnu who have repeatedly preserved it from utter destruction, others as Parashurâm (परशुराम) who after conquering have charitably given it away to the Brâhmins, as if it were a mere straw, and others, as Bali (बलि) who have been holding undivided sway over the fourteen spheres, we cannot find the least possible ground for the vain conceit of those who can claim only a few small villages as their own

The third line “इहहिभुवनान्यन्ये धीराश्चतुर्दश भुञ्जते” is also quoted under Bhāṭṭihari (भर्तृहरि) by Namsādhu in his commentary on Rudrata's Kāvya-lāhara (रुद्रट्टकृत काव्यालङ्कार)

आप राजा हैं वैसे हमभी श्रीगुरुमहाराजकी उपासनासे पाई हुई प्रज्ञाशक्तिसे समन्वित हैं, आप जैसे गजाश्वादिके ऐश्वर्यसे विख्यात हैं वैसे हमारा यश भी कविजन दशों दिशाओंमें फैलाते हैं । इसलिए हे अपमान करनेवाले राजा ! आपमें और हममें कुछ विशेष अंतर नहीं है, सो यदि आप हमारा यथोचित सत्कार करने से मुंह मोड़ते हैं तो हमकोभी आपके आदरकी कोई वांछा नहीं है ॥ २३ ॥

Thou art a king, and we are the masters of profound learning as taught by our revered preceptors ; thou art famous by thy fortunes, whereas the fame of our good name is spread by poets throughout the world Thus, oh proud chief, that darest insult the learned, where does lie the great difference between our respective positions, that thou turnest thy face so proudly against us, for we too are quite regardless of thy favours ?

शतशः राजाओंने जिस पृथ्वीको क्षणमात्रभी अभुक्त नहीं छोड़ी उस अनेक भूपालोंकी भोगी हुई भूमिका लाभ करके भूमिपालोंका इस कदर अभिमान करना सर्वथा अनुचित है, परंतु कष्टका विषय है कि इस सारी पृथ्वीके अंशांशके छोटेसे अंशके एक मात्र खंडके स्वामी भी आज दिन मूर्खताके हेतु विषाद करनेके बदले फूले अंग नहीं समाते हैं ! ॥ २४ ॥

What magnanimous chiefs can pride over the possession of this poor earth which has been continually enjoyed from its very existence by hundreds of kings that are now no more ? But, alas ! those who can claim only a nominal portion of a part of its part do now delight in calling themselves as kings. From this we must infer that the foolish are generally prone to be happy where, on the contrary, they ought to be sadly grieved.

Surrounded on all sides by water, like a small

The birth of that great man is indeed a memorable event in the history of the world whose white skull is ever being borne as an ornament of head by Śiva, the enemy of love, but, now, alas ! we see that the generality of mankind are humbly bowing their heads at the feet of others for the sole satisfaction of securing a few days' living, and the realisation of this boon is looked upon as something really grand.
 However, we do not know that they can ever justify in the least possible degree the vain pride and conceit which they have the impudence to indulge in this disgraceful step

The point of the stanza appears to be this —Foolish men instead of being grieved feel a sort of pride in bowing their heads to others'

Oh my heart ! for what special reward dost thou try to please the hearts of others, and thus to subject thyself to a number of heartrending troubles ? If thou succeedest to content thy own inner self, the wondrous virtue of contentment will grow of itself into thee, which will, like a Chintâmani (चिन्तामणि) or philosopher's stone, fulfil all thy desires without a single exception

I am anxiously waiting for the approach of those happy days when I shall be sitting in a meditative posture somewhere on the Himâlayan range and the banks of the sacred Ganges, practising the process of Yôga or mental abstraction, fully absorbed in the immediate meditation of the supreme Being, and wholly entranced into ecstatic sleep, quite incognisant of what is passing around me, so that the old antelopes will be gently rubbing their itching horns against my senseless body without the least apprehension of my sentient state.

What more can we say than to assert that one who wishes the emancipation of his soul must consider (1) Mahādeva, to be his only god, (2) the Ganges, as his holy river, (3) a rocky cave, his only home, (4) the ten points of the compass, his only clothing, (5) Time, his only friend, (6) freedom from humiliation, his only vow, and (7) a Vata tree (banyan), his only wife ?

The canon herein laid down only applies to the case of Yōgis or hermits. Though the poet does not mention that in the text he must, in writing it, have in mind the life of a saintly ascetic. The life of a Grihastha (गृहस्थ) or householder is guided by rules entirely different from the above.

In obedience to the teachings of the Hindu Śāstras every man must renounce the world and take himself to forest in his old age
 This being the ultimate aim of all good Hindus, the poet here depicts of a householder never forgets his future end to give up the world and contemplate his Maker in seclusion

The footnote, appended to stanza 46 may also be appropriately

Those persons who have determined to put an end to their actions (i. e. who have entirely effaced from their minds the notion of good or bad) by considering their palms as sacred vessels, eating the plentiful supply of alms obtained by their continued wanderings, taking the ten expansive quarters of the globe as their neat clothing, and lying down upon the bed of extensive earth, those who have secured true mental contentment by thinking the attainment of worldly indifference as the ultimate end of their life; and those who have given up the various ways of degrading themselves before others, are indeed deserving of all praise and honour

चक्रवर्ती महाराजाओंका प्रसन्न करना असंभव है, अन्यान्य भूपालोंका चित्त घोड़ेके समान चंचल होता है और हमारा मनोरथ बहुत बड़ा है क्योंकि संसारके सर्वोत्तम पदका लाभ करनाही हमारा हार्दिक उद्देश्य है, और यह वृद्धावस्था हमारी देहका नाश किए देती है और मृत्यु तो हमारे सर्वस्व जीवनकाही हरण कर लेती है । इसलिए हे मित्र ! विद्वान् मनुष्यके लिए इस जगत्में तपश्चरण करनेके सिवाय कल्याणकारक कर्म दूसरा कोई नहीं है ॥ ५२ ॥

To secure the favour of our lord is a hard and difficult task, and to please the minds of kings which are as unsteady as horses is also impossible, whereas our ambitions are high, and our minds are bent on attaining to the supreme end (i e salvation); the body is old and worn out and death is depriving us of our entire existence ; it is, therefore, true that a wise man can look up for no other good in this world except the performance of virtuous actions and penance

The word तपस् here means either moral virtue or meditation connected with the practice of personal self denial or bodily mortification

संसारके विषयभोग सबही मेघ समूहके मध्यवर्ती प्रकाश करनेवाली विजलीके समान चंचल हैं, मनुष्य की अवस्था वायुके झखोरेसे बखेरे हुए मेघपटलकी वृष्टि के समान अस्थिर है, और ऐसेही यौवनसुखकी लालसा भी अत्यंत चपल है । इसलिए इन सब बातोंका विचार करके हे पंडितजनो ! तुमको उचित है कि धैर्यपूर्वक मनकी एकाग्रताकी सिद्धिसे सुसिद्धयोगके साधनमें अपना मन लगावो ॥ ५३ ॥

Worldly pleasures are as unsteady as the flash of lightning appearing in the midst of a clouded sky ; life is as transient as rain drops falling down from a group of clouds scattered in various directions by the force of wind, and the aspirations of youth are also extremely frail and fickle I would, therefore, implore the learned that they must consider all mundane objects as quite transitory and consequently set their minds to the practice of Yoga the attainment of which is quite easy through patient concentration of mind.

Is it that the beautiful retreats (lit slabs) of the Himâlayâs cooled down by Gangetic waves and inhabited by Vidyâdharâs (विद्याधरा) have altogether disappeared from the face of this earth that people have thus condescended to lead a poor disgraceful life upon the alms of others ?

The poet indirectly means to say that we should rather leave this world and resort to solitary caves of the Himalayas than submit to the disgrace of begging alms at the hands of our fellow beings. Persons who can give with a good grace are very few. Instead of being pitied beggars are frequently disgraced for their poverty by their wealthy donors.

जब हम जानते हैं कि युगांत करनेवाली अग्निसे संतप्त होकर सुमेरु भी अवश्य पड़ जाता है, अनेकानेक मकर ग्राहादिको आश्रय देनेवाले समुद्रभी सूख जाते हैं और बड़े बड़े पर्वतोंसे दृढ हुई पृथ्वीभी अवश्य चलविचल होजाती है, तो हाथीके बच्चेके कर्णाग्रभागके समान अत्यंत चंचल इस शरीरके विनाश होनेमें कौनसा आश्चर्य है ? ॥ ६९ ॥

When we know that at the end of the four Yugas (युगा) or ages, the splendid Meru (मेरु) being attacked by the fire of universal destruction, shall also fall ; when we see that vast seas the abode of innumerable sharks and crocodiles, shall also dry ; and when we are sure that the earth, though sustained by deep-rooted mountains shall also collapse, what possible faith can we fairly put into this feeble mortal frame which is as unsteady as the ever flapping ears of a young elephant ?

अकेला, आशरहित, शान्तचित्त, पाणिपात्र (हाथको ही पात्र समझनेवाला), और दिगम्बर (नम्र या दिशा मात्र कोही वस्त्र समझनेवाला) होकर, हे महादेव ! मैं अपने कर्मोंको निर्मूलन करनेमें कब समर्थ हूंगा ? ॥७०॥

Oh God (Śiva), when will the day come when I shall be able to put a stop to all my actions whether good or bad by being (1) alone, (2) devoid of all aspirations, and (3) contented, as well as by thinking my hands as necessary vessels and the different quarters of the globe as a sufficient clothing for my naked self ?

Quoted anonymously in the Subhāshutārāli (सुभाषितावलि) at No 3404

The line एकाकी गृहसन्त्यक्तः पाणिपात्रो दिगम्बरः also occurs in the Panchatantra V 15 (पचतत्रम् ५ तंत्रम् १५).

The word कर्मनिर्मूलन literally means uprooting actions

Every action of man is done with some purpose either good or bad. Destruction of actions means doing things without any personal concern. The doctrine is fully explained by Śrīkrishna to Arjuna in the Bhagawadgītā vanquished enemies, although they have favoured their relations with wealth and prosperity, and although the mortal men have somehow prolonged the span of their lives to the end of a Kalpa (कल्प), they must all bear it in mind that unless they have secured their future happiness they have done really nothing

Unless we seek real enjoyment of communion with self which is capable of destroying all worldly anxieties and dangers of our hearts, it is of very little importance (1) whether we clothe ourselves in threadbare rags or dress in beautiful and neat silken garments, (2) whether we possess no other companion excepting our only wife or command the services of numerous servants together with horses, elephants and other conveyances for our use, and (3) whether we feast on delicious tables of rice and other dainties or subsist ourselves on rotten and simple food got towards the close of a day.

The construction and meaning of this stanza are not quite clear

भक्ति भवे मरणजन्मभयं हृदिस्थं, स्नेहो न
 बन्धुषु न मन्मथजा विकाराः । संसर्गदोषर-हिता विजना वनान्ता, वैराग्यमस्ति किमतः
 परमार्थनीयम् ॥ ७३ ॥

शिवजीकी भक्ति, अंतःकरणमें जन्ममरणका भय,
 बंधुवर्गसे विरक्ति, कामदेवके विकारोंका अभाव और
 संसर्ग दोषसे रहित एकान्त निर्जन वनका वास, ऐसे
 वैराग्यके सिवाय मनुष्यको और क्या वांछनीय है ? ७३

When a man is faithfully devoted to Siva, when his heart is always awake to the pangs of birth and death, when he has not the least attachment to his relatives, when he is dead against passionate excitements of love, when leading a secluded life into the interior of a lonely forest he is quite free from the evil effects of society at large, and when his mind is wholly indifferent to worldly pleasures, there is nothing more to be asked for or desired by him.

The construction of the sloka is very puzzling and consequently its exposition requires some stretching of intellect. The difficulty arises out of the terse and laconic form of diction used by the author.

तस्मादनन्तमजरं परमं विकासि, तद्ब्रह्म
चिन्तय किमेभि रसद्विकल्पैः । यस्यानुष-ङ्गिण इमे भुवनाधिपत्य-भोगादयः कृपण-
लोकमता भवन्ति ॥ ७४ ॥

इसलिए हे मनुष्यो ! संसारके मिथ्या विकल्पोंको छोड़ कर उस अनंत, अजर, परमोत्कृष्ट और प्रकाश-रूप ब्रह्मका चितवन करो, कि कृपणलोगोंके माननीय त्रिलोकीके राज्यादिके भोगादि जिसका स्वयमेव अनु-गमन करते हैं ॥ ७४ ॥

Leaving aside all sceptic and vain reasonings, you should devote yourself to the contemplation of that endless immortal, supreme, and luminous Brahma in whose imperial train all enjoyments of worldly sovereignty, which are so much coveted by misers, invariably follow.

This śloka which is same as stanza 24 in the Sāntibāta Part III (शान्तिशतकम् । ३ परिच्छेद) is quoted under Bhartrihari (भर्तृहरि) in the Subhāshitāvalī (सुभाषितावलि) at No 3452

Rev Wortham thus translates the latter half of this stanza in a different way —“ If a man be truly seeking unity with the supreme Being, all earthly pleasures and powers seem worthy only of the notice of low-minded men ”

The point seems to be this —In the opinion of a truly religious person all earthly powers and enjoyments are worth considering only by the mean

पातालमाविशसि यासि नभो विलंघ्य, दि- ड्मडलं भ्रमसि मानसचापलेन । भ्रान्त्याऽपि
 जातु विमलं कथमात्मनीनं, तद्ब्रह्म न स्म-रसि निर्वृति मेषियेन ॥ ७५ ॥

हे मन ! तू अपनी स्वाभाविक चंचलतासे कभी तो पातालमें प्रवेश कर जाता है, कभी उछल करके आकाशमें गमन करने लगता है और कभी दशों दिशाओंमें इधरका उधर भ्रमण करता फिरता है ; परंतु कैसे खेदकी बात है कि तू भूलकर भी उस आत्मप्रकाश परब्रह्मका कभी स्मरण नहीं करता कि जिसके चिन्तवन करनेसे तेरी मोक्ष हो सकती है ! ॥ ७५ ॥

By thy natural unsteadiness sometimes thou penetratest into Pātāla (पाताल) or the depths of nether regions, sometimes traversest ethereal spaces, and sometimes wanderest over different quarters of the globe, but oh mind ! thou never thinkest, even by mistake, of that supreme Being who is sitting within thy ownself, and by whose meditation thou canst easily attain to the highest contentment and happiness !

The verse is ascribed to Arigata (अर्गट) in the Subhāshitāvali (सुभाषितावलि) at No 3447

The word निर्वृति may also mean tranquility

रात्रिः सैव पुनः स एव दिवसो मत्वाऽबुधा
जन्तवो, धावन्त्युद्यमिनस्तथैव निभृतप्रार-ब्धतत्क्रियाः । व्यापारैः पुनरुक्तभुक्तविषयै- रेवंविधेनाऽमुना, संसारेण कदर्थिताः कथमहो
मोहान्नलज्जामहे ॥ ७६ ॥

वही रात और वही दिन समझ कर ये मूर्खजन उद्योग करते हुए निज निज कर्ममें प्रवृत्त होकर पूर्व भुक्त विषयादिका वारंवार भोग करते रहते हैं । इस प्रकार इस संसारक्रमसे नित्य प्रतिविडबित होकर भी मोह-जालमें फँसे हुए हम लोग कुछभी लज्जित नहीं होते यह बड़े आश्चर्यकी बात है ! ॥ ७६ ॥

Without entertaining the least idea of the flight of time, the ignorant people who have set themselves to their cherished pursuits are daily led astray to run after their individual undertakings, and earnestly long for the pleasures which they have repeatedly enjoyed a number of times. However though we are thus frequently deceived by the illusionary course of this world we are never ashamed of our own folly. It is indeed a great mystery !

PURPORT—Day follows night, night follows day, and so it continues uninterruptedly. As there is no end to the repetition of days and nights, so there is no end to man's work. (Every morning man goes without murmur to his work of yesterday, with unabated vigour.) Being thus deceived by nature we long to enjoy the same objects over and over again without ever being ashamed of our folly.

विरतिरूपी कांताके प्रसंगसे प्रमुदित होकर पृथ्वीतल की मनोहर शय्या, भुजलतारूप विपुल उपधान, आकाशरूप मंडप, अनुकूल पवनरूप व्यजन (पंखा) और चंद्रमारूप प्रकाशमान् दीपक, आदिकी विविध विभूतिसे युक्त मुनीश्वर शान्तचित्त होकर राजाके समान सुखपूर्वक शयन करता है ॥ ७७ ॥

A contented saint who is prone to take this earth for his fine sofa, his creeper-like arms for ample pillows, the endless sky for his canopy, a favourable breeze for his fan, the refulgent moon for his lamp, and total indifference to world for his loving wife, always sleeps with as much ease and comfort as a great monarch of enormous wealth and power

The stanza is same as śloka 8 in the Sāntisatala Part IV (शान्तिशतकम्) । ४ परिच्छेद) .

Cf—“ भू पर्य्यको निजभुजलता कन्दुकं खवितानं.

जिस महाराज्यके सामने त्रिलोकी का राज्य विरस प्रतीत होता है, उस परब्रह्मके ध्यानको प्राप्त करके आसन, वस्त्र और मान आदि घटनासे युक्त भोगविलासमें प्रीति करना सर्वथा अनुचित है क्योंकि भोग भी केवल वही एक है जो परमोत्कृष्ट और सदैव प्रकाशमान है, और जिसका आस्वादन करलेनेपर त्रिलोकीके राज्यादि संबंधी विषय सबही विरस और फीके हो जाते हैं ॥७८॥

After attaining to that great spiritual knowledge which entirely deprives the sovereignty of the three worlds of all its charms, you must not feel the least affection for rank, dress, and honour for, the only enjoyment worthy of a man's aspiration is that which is supreme and immortal, and which, when once relished by him, renders the pleasures of universal empire as altogether insipid and unpleasant

The word शासन literally means rule, government, power Here it perhaps refers to control of passions so absolutely necessary to a Yogi

Cf —“ जिन नखरने है लिया, रसिक योग का स्वाद ।

वे सब जग के राज को, जानत हेतु विषाद ॥ ”

वेद, स्मृति, पुराण और महा विस्तृत शास्त्रके पठन पाठनसे, तथा स्वर्गरूपी ग्राममें निवास मात्रका फल देने वाले यज्ञादि कार्योंके करनेसे क्या प्रयोजन है? क्योंकि संसारके बंधनसे उत्पन्न होनेवाले दुःख प्रपंचको विध्वंस करनेमें कालाग्निके समान स्वात्मानन्दका लाभ करनेके विनापूर्वोक्त निःशेष कर्म वाणिज्य वृत्तिके समान हैं ॥ ७९ ॥

What advantage is there in studying Veidas (वेद), the Smritis (स्मृति), the Purānas (पुराण), and the numerous Shāstias, or in performing various sacrificial rites and ceremonies whose only fruit is to secure for man a small residence in the village of heaven? Excepting the attainment of that spiritual knowledge of self which is the one great source of all contentment and happiness, and the sole deadly fire for the destruction of worldly anxieties and cares, all other pursuits are nothing more than mere mercenary crafts

मनुष्योंकी आयुष्य जलके बुडुदेके समान चंचल है, यौवनकी शोभा थोड़े ही दिन स्थिर रहनेवाली है, द्रव्यादि पदार्थ मनोरथके तुल्य शीघ्र विनाश होनेवाले हैं, विषयादि भोगविलास वर्षाकालमें चमकनेवाली बिजलीके सदृश हैं और प्राणप्यारी स्त्रियोंके आलिंगनका सुखभी बहुत चिरस्थायी नहीं है । इसलिए हे मतिमानो ! संसारके भयरूप समुद्रकी परली पार जानेके लिए परमात्माके ध्यानमें मग्न होनाही उचित है ॥८०॥

Life is as unsteady as waves of water, beauty of youth is only lasting for a few days, riches are momentary like thought, all enjoyments are as transient as flashes of lightning amidst a raining cloud, and the of our sweethearts are likewise extremely fleeting. Consequently if you be really anxious to cross the ocean of worldly woes you should not fail to concentrate your mind on the absolute devotion of Brahma

The phrase “ कतिपयदिवसस्थायिनि ” is also to be found in the Bhogaṇābandha (भोजप्रबन्ध) at page 12, Bombay Edition

As the gentle move of a Shafari (शफरी) or a small glittering fish does not cause the least possible undulation into the waters of a deep ocean, so this circumscribed universe is likewise incompetent to tempt the minds of great magnanimous souls

Quoted under Bhadrachari (भर्तृहरि) in the Subhāshatārāḥ (सुभाषितावलि । ४९५) and the Sānuqulhasapaddhati (शार्ङ्गघर-पद्धति । २६३)

(कथासरित्सागर . । शशाङ्कवती लम्बक । २८ तरंग .)

ब्रह्माण्ड or egg of Brahma here stands for this world

The word जातु is an indeclinable and means ever or it all

The mind of a wise man is here compared to an ocean and the world to a small fish you all with folded hands, because, it is to you and you alone that I am really indebted for the final absolution of my soul, inasmuch as the joint assistance of all of you has enabled me to perform a lot of virtuous actions resulting in the rise of true spiritual knowledge which, in its turn, has destroyed the illusionary influence of the world, and having sanctified the soul of all impurities has thus empowered it to merge into Parabrahma (परब्रह्म), the Supreme Being

The stanza is same as śloka 25 in the Sāntīkāta Part IV शान्तिशतकम् । ४ परिच्छेद.). It is quoted under भर्तृहरि in the शार्ङ्ग-धरपद्धति at No 4095

यावत्स्वस्थमिदं शरीर मरुजं यावज्जरादूरतो,

 कीदृशः ॥ ८६ ॥

जबतक यह शरीर रोगादिसे रहित होकर तंदुरुस्त बना रहे, जबतक वृद्धावस्था न आवे और जबतक इंद्रियोंकी शक्ति ज्यों की त्यों बनी रहे और जबतक आयुष्यका क्षय न होवे, विद्वान मनुष्योंको उचित है कि आत्मकल्याणके निमित्त यथोचित प्रयत्न कर लें क्योंकि घरमें आग लगनेपर कूप खोदनेका उद्योग सर्वथा निष्फल है ॥ ८६ ॥

A learned man should always try for the good of his soul while (1) he is hale and healthy, (2) his body is quite free from attacks of various diseases, (3) he is not set upon by old age, (4) he is in full unimpaired possession of all his senses, and (5) there is no sign of decline of his life. Of what possible use is the effort of sinking down a well when the house is already in flames ?

निरर्थक ही व्यतीत हुई है ॥ ८७ ॥

Alas ! (1) we have neither studied the philosophy that enables us to lead a moral and modest life, as well as to stop the mouths of our adversaries and disputants, (2) nor have we raised up our fame to heaven by breaking the globular heads of elephants by means of pointed swords, (3) nor have we drunk in moonlit nights the nectar of our sweetheart's tender lips; we have therefore uselessly wasted away our youth like burning out a lamp in a desolate house !

ज्ञानं सतां मानमदादिनाशनं, केषांचिदेतन्म-दमानकारणम् । स्थानं विविक्तं यमिनां वि- मुक्तये, कामातुराणामतिकामकारणम् ॥८८॥

जो ज्ञान सत्पुरुषोंके लिए अभिमानादि नाश करनेका हेतु होता है वही ज्ञान अन्यान्यजनोंके लिए मदमानादि उत्पन्न करनेका कारण बन जाता है; वैसेही जो एकान्त निर्जन स्थान संयमी जनोंको विषयादिसे विमुक्त करता है वही स्थान कामी जनोंके मनोमें कामोद्दीपनका कारण हो जाता है ॥ ८८ ॥

The same knowledge which is conducive to extirpate the existence of vain conceit from the minds of the good is also productive of vanity and pride into those of others. A lonely place which frees those who have obtained complete control over the senses from attraction to world likewise becomes the cause of lustful excitement in passionate hearts.

Cf—“ मदोपशमनं शास्त्रं खलानां कुरुतेमदम् ” । (सूक्तावलि. २३)

The poet means to say that every thing is either good or bad according to the tendency of our mind towards virtue or vice.

क्वचिद्वीणावादः क्वचिदपि च हाहेति रुदितं,

 क्वचिद्विद्वद्गोष्ठी क्वचिदपि सुरामत्तकलहो, न
 जाने संसारः किममृतमयः किं विषमयः ॥८९

इस संसारमें कहीं तो वीणाका मधुर गान और कहीं हृदयविदारक रुदन श्रवण करनेमें आता है, कहीं मन हरण करनेवाली तरुणी स्त्री और कहीं जरावस्थाकी झुर्रियोंसे विकलित शरीरवाली वृद्धा स्त्री देखनेमें आती है, और इसही तरह कहीं तो विद्वान् मनुष्योंकी गोष्ठी और कहीं मदिराके मतवालोंकी कलह सुनी जाती है, इसलिए हम यथार्थतासे यह बात निश्चयपूर्वक नहीं कह सकते कि यह जगत् अमृतमय है या विषमय है ॥८९॥

Here we hear the music of a flute, and there the weepings and wailings of afflicted souls, here we see a charming lady, and there an old person with worn out and wrinkled body; and here again we find a concourse of learned men, and there a quarrelsome lot of drunkards. We are, therefore, quite unable to say whether the world is made up of nectar or poison

Why is it that the learned are content to live in places other than holy Kāshi (Benares) in whose gardens the subsistence on various kinds of fruits will serve as the hardest penance , where the wearing of a small piece of cloth over the privities is consideath is heartily awaited like that of a good and auspicious event

According to the Hindus Kāsi (Benares) is one of the seven sacred cities that bring final redemption to the man who may happen to die there The seven sacred cities are thus enumerated —

Although I am quite unable to make out any difference between Siva, the lord of the universe, and Vishnu, the omnipresent god of the entire creation ;
yet, my mind is naturally led to the devotion of Siva, whose forehead is adorned with a crescent moon.

The word Jagadantarâtma जगदन्तरात्मा literally means the soul of universe. Bhartrihari here says that notwithstanding his incompetency to discern any difference between Vishnu and Siva his mind is naturally prone to worship Siva. Properly speaking Vishnu is generally worshipped by worldly men, whereas those who renounce the world adore Siva. The Author has himself alluded to this fact in a previous stanza.

The different kinds of sensual enjoyments are all perishable, but it is they that constitute the world i. e. cause our repeated births and deaths on this globe. Why, then, are people trying their utmost to run after them? Therefore, if you believe our words, we would advise you to devote yourself to a concentrated meditation of the self-luminous ego that destroys the manifold snares of desires and aspirations, and entirely extirpates the very existence of passion from your hearts

The poet here advises people to give up the pursuit of worldly pleasures and let their souls be free from the bonds of desires and enter into the meditation of self

 कष्टके साथ रहना पड़ता है, यौवन समयमें कान्ताका
 वियोगरूपी दुःसह दुःख सहना पड़ता है, और वृद्धाव-

While yet unborn man remains imprisoned with contracted limbs in the narrow and impious womb of his mother, in youth, he is subjected to excessive grief resulting from the sad bereavement of his beloved wife, whereas, in old age, he is doomed to wear a sorrowful appearance caused by the dis-honourable treatment he meets at the hands of (beautiful young) women, We would, therefore, beg to hear from men where in this world we can find the smallest particle of happiness and pleasure ?

Cf — " I find in life that suffering succeeds to suffering, and disappointment to disappointment, as wave to wave "

विधाताने मनुष्यकी आयुष्य १०० वर्षकी नियत की है जिसका आधा भाग तो रात्रिमें व्यतीत होजाता है, और शेष आधेके आधे २५ वर्ष बाल्य और वृद्धावस्थाके ग्रास बन जाते हैं और बाकीके २५ वर्ष मनुष्योंको अनेक व्याधि और वियोगके दुःखसहित सेवादिमें व्यतीत करने पड़ते हैं । इसलिए हम कह सकते हैं कि जल-तरंगके समान चंचल इस जीवनमें सुखका लेश मात्र भी कहीं नहीं है ॥ १०६ ॥

The term of man's existence is limited to hundred years. half of it is passed in sleep (lit, nights), and half of what remains is taken up by childhood and old age; while the rest is spent by him in disgraceful occupations like that of serving others, not altogether unmixed with the bitter consequences of diseases, separations, and misfortunes. Where, then is the least possible trace of happiness in a man's life which is as unsteady as waves of water. ?

Cf —

 On earthly pleasures ! ”

विमल बुद्धिवाले ब्रह्मज्ञानी कैसा दुष्कर कर्म करते हैं कि जो (स्त्री और धनादिक) सांसारिक भोग विलाससे बिलकुल निस्पृह हो बैठते हैं, क्योंकि हम तो भूत और वर्तमान कालमें अप्राप्त और भविष्यतकी प्राप्ति की दृढ निश्चय न होनेवाले इच्छा मात्र परिग्रहका त्याग भी कदापि नहीं कर सकते ! ॥ १०७ ॥

The task undertaken by those that have attained to real spiritual knowledge is undoubtedly the most difficult one, as they entirely forsake the actual enjoyments of sensual pleasures and wealth, and become quite indifferent to their attractions ; but we, on the contrary, who have neither enjoyed them in the past, nor possess them at present, nor can say with any certainty of getting them in the coming future, are even unable to give up this nominal possession which exists only in our fond wishes.

The verse is same as śloka 4 in the Śāntisataka Part 1
(शान्तिशतकम् । १ परिच्छेद.)

The idea of the śloka seems to be this —To give up actual pleasures may be somewhat difficult, but to forsake what we have not should not cause the least difficulty to man.

 हैं, और फूटे घड़ेसे जलके निकलते रहनेके सदृश आयुष्य
 भी प्रतिदिन क्षीण होती चली जाती है, परंतु तिसपर
 भी ये मनुष्य दुष्कर्म करनेसे नहीं डरते यह बड़े ही आश्चर्यकी बात है ॥ १०८ ॥

The birth of that great Tortoise Koorma (कूर्म) is indeed to be hailed with loud acclamation ; for, it is He who has voluntarily offered His back for the support of this heavy and extensive Earth ; similarly, the birth of Dhuwa (ध्रुव or the pole star) is also a matter of memorable record , for it is he who remains fixed in the midst of the stellar world incessantly revolving around him All other creatures are daily born and dead within the interior of this universe without the least notice being ever taken of them ; because they pay very little heed in affording the slightest help to their fellow beings, just like the mosquitoes which though possessing wings are unable to fly a great distance either upwards or downwards, and thus end their miserable lives within the Goolar in which they are born

भोगविलासमें रोगादि उत्पन्न होनेका, सत्कुलमें वंश
परम्पराके टूटनेका, द्रव्यमें राजाका, मौनधारणमें दी- नताका, पराक्रममें शत्रुका, सुन्दरतामें जराका, शास्त्रमें
विवादका, गुणमें दुर्जनका, और कायामें मृत्युका भय
सर्वदा बना रहता है । इसलिए हम कहते हैं कि इस
पृथ्वीतलपर और सब पदार्थ तो भययुक्त हैं परन्तु एक
वैराग्यही ऐसा है कि जो सब प्रकारके भयसे सर्वथा
निर्भय है ॥ ११६ ॥

Enjoyment is subject to disease, respectable family to degradation, and wealth to the fear of being forcibly taken away by kings, verbal silence is prone to be misconstrued into penuity, and physical valour is always afraid of confronting a powerful foe, beauty is subject to old age, learning to controversy, body to death, and good qualities to the faultfinding spirit of evil persons. Thus we see that everything else in this world is indeed subject to danger and fear, but Vanāgya (वैराग्य) or asceticism alone is entirely free from any sort of fear and apprehension.

This stanza is also found in the Ashtaratna. The following verse which differs very slightly from our text stands in the Chaturanga-sāngraha (चतुर्वर्गसंग्रह) of Kshemendra (क्षेमेन्द्र) —

“ भोगे रोगभय सुखे क्षयभयं वित्तेऽग्निभूद्भयम्,

ABBREVIATIONS

Besides availing myself of the use of a number of abbreviations of ordinary occurrence and everyday use (like those of Ed for edition, p for page, Bom for Bombay, Cal for Calcutta, No. for number &c &c) for brevity's sake I have also ventured to adopt some conventional short forms in the preparation of the present volume. The following key will, it is hoped, be found to give all necessary information and explanation of them.

NOTES.

A As to the first place being given to the नीतिशतकम् Kṛiśnaśāstri Mahâbala says “इह खलु राजाधिपतिव श्रीभर्तृहरिभयलोकसाधक नीतिशृङ्गारवैराग्याख्यशतकत्रयात्मकं ग्रन्थ चिकीर्षु सदाचरणस्य नीतिज्ञानपूर्वकत्वात्तज्ज्ञानाय प्रथम नीतिशतकमारभमाण इत्यादि ”

B. नीति is a very comprehensive term including everything between the sciences of moral and political philosophies Briefly speaking it is generally used for wisdom and prudence

C. The word Nitisatakam (नीतिशतकम्) is translated by Prof. Tawney as Hundred stanzas on Ethics and Politics At page 12 of his preface, he says “ Though the word ‘Niti’ is usually translated policy, most of the stanzas arranged under this head are rather of an ethical and social character They inculcate maxims of worldly prudence, and seem designed to teach knowledge of men and individuals, rather than as members of political communities.”

I (a) “ As Prof. Max Muller has suggested that Kshapanaka may be a name of Bhartrihari, it may, perhaps, be desirable to point out that in the अनेकार्थध्वनि मञ्जरी attributed to a महाक्षपणक we have the phrase स्वानुबोधकमानाय which seems to bear the same meaning as the phrase we have now discussed (viz, स्वानुबोधकमानाय) The stanza before us, however, is also given as the opening stanza of the Yogavasiṣṭhasâra in Aufrecht’s Catalogue ” (K T Telang)

Here I cannot help dissenting from the view held by the aforesaid learned scholars First, because no Sanskrit writer has ever said anything about the identity of क्षणक and भर्तृहरि, and, secondly, because the use of a single phrase स्वानुबोधैकमानाय by both the authors is merely a thing of pure accident which cannot logically lead us to infer that क्षणक and भर्तृहरि were one and the same person * Dr Bhau Dâjî who thinks भर्तृहरि as one of the नवरत्न or nine gems probably confounds him with क्षणक The nine gems are thus enumerated in the following ślōka

“ घन्वन्तरि क्षणकामरसिंह शंक्रु वेतालभट्ट घटखर्पर कालिदासा ।
ख्यातो वराहमिहिरो नृपते. सभायां रत्नानि वै वररुचि नैव विक्रमस्य ॥”

(b). दिक्काल Needless to say that Indian Science recognises ten दिशा's or directions (viz, North, North-east, East, Southeast, South, Southwest, West, Northwest, above or zenith, and below or nadir), and three काल's or times (viz. past, present, and future).

II (a) It is a general belief among learned Sanskritists that this stanza furnishes the keynote to the composition of this work, and especially to that of the last Chapter dealing with asceticism, and hence to my mind its appropriate place would have been there. However, as far as it is known to me, no edition of Bhartrihari's Centuries has ever dared transfer it from Nīti to Vairāgya. Consequently, no apology would, I think, be needed for its present position

(b) There is a tradition that once upon a time Bhartrihari was presented with a wondrous fruit of divine virtues capable of bestowing immortality and

* The reader is here requested to refer to a number of phrases, from other works, similar to those of the śatakas, which are pointed out in the footnotes at their proper places in the course of this edition everlasting youth upon one who ate it. The king who held his wife even dearer to his own life thought it advisable to give this fruit to his beloved Queen. However the queen consort had no love for the magnanimous husband, and so, after receiving the aforesaid gift from the Râja she gave it to her paramour who passed it on to the hands of a prostitute with whom he was in real love. The prostitute who had the highest regard and affection for Bhartihari came to him, and respectfully placed the miraculous fruit before her sovereign lord. But no sooner were his eyes cast upon it than the wise king did at once recognise it to be the same fruit with which a few days ago he was himself presented by a pious Brahmana. A strong suspicion immediately rose into his mind and he made full and prompt enquiries about the matter. The whole thing being soon clear he became much agrieved and distressed at heart. His affection for mundane objects thereby suffered a great deal and his heart was thus convinced of the utter impossibility of finding sincere love in women upon the surface of this terrestrial globe. This śloka has a covert reference to the aforesaid tradition.

III. ब्रह्मा is one of the Hindu Trinity. His special work is सृष्टिश्चना i. e. bringing forth the creation.

V. Strictly speaking, a hare has no horns. To find out hare's horns therefore denotes an utter impossibility. The acquirement of oil from particles of sand, and that of water in the midst of a mirage are likewise impossible.

“ On शशविषाणं the following stanza may be quoted एष वध्यासुतो याति स्वपुष्प कृतशेखरः । मृगदृष्णाम्भसिल्लात. शशशृङ्ग

धनुर्धर. ॥ which brings together the expressions most in use to signify things which do not exist ”

(K. T. Telang)

VI. (a) Śirīṣha (शिरीष) A species of flower trees. The flower of Śirīṣha is generally regarded as the type of delicacy by Indian poets.

(b) क्षाराम्बुधि Ocean of salt water. It is worth noting in connection with this that according to Indian mythology the earth is surrounded with seven oceans, viz—(1) क्षीरोद , (2) इक्षुत्सोद , (3) सुरोद., (4) घृतोदः, (5) दध्योद., (6) क्षारोदः and (7) शुद्धोद. or oceans of milk, sugarcandy juice, wine, ghee, curdle, salt and drinkable water.

VII. एकान्तगुणं means productive of extraordinary good. एकान्ता अतिशयिता गुणा यस्मिन् तत् । “ अथातिशयोपर. तीव्रैकान्तनितान्तानि ” इत्यमरः ।

VIII The late lamented Pandit K. T. Telang says : “ I am inclined to take यदाकि as equal to यदा 5 कि to mark distinctly the contrast with the third line. ” Needless to add that agreeing with him I have here adopted the suggested reading though I have not found it in any of the copies consulted for this edition.

IX. The word निरुपमरस which has here been rendered as ‘devoid of all juice and taste,’ literally means ‘of incomparable taste’ i. e. whose disgusting taste can stand no comparison whatever.

X. (a) The Ganges (गंगा) The rise of the Ganges is mythologically traced to the divine feet of Vishnu, whence after flowing through the heavens, she falls upon the head of Siva ; and lastly, from the head of Siva, she descends into the world and flowing down from the heights of the Himâlayas empties her waters into the Bay of Bengal. The Ganges is described as having become arrogant in the Râmâyana (Bâlakânda XLIII., 6, Bomb. Ed.) and this fact will amply account for her successive falls.

(b) “ How Bhâgirath got the Ganges to Siva’s head, thence to the Himâlaya, thence to earth and thence to the nether world ; and how her waters there sanctified the offspring of Sagara is well known. For the whole story see Râmâyana loci Cit. According to that work (st 75), the Ganges गगनच्छङ्कर शिरस्ततो धरणिमागता ॥ शतसुख applies literally to the fall of to the river and to that of the man who is lost all sense of right and wrong ; it applies in the sense of a variety of ways ” (K T Tetang).

(c) “ Bhagiratha, the son of Dilipa and great-grandson of Sagara, king of Ayodhyâ, brought the sacred Ganges from heaven to earth by the aid of Siva, who is fabled to have received the stream on his head ; he then conducted this river to the ocean in order to purify the ashes of his ancestors, the 60,000 sons of Sagara, who were reduced to ashes by Vishnu in the form of Kapila, when they dug through the earth in order to recover the sacrificial horse which had been stolen from their father. ” (Prof. Tawney.)

XII The original text of the latter half of the stanza as herein given does not admit of the erroneous interpretation given to it by Mr Durga Prasad of Lahore who translates it thus “ The superiority of his luck over the lower animals lies in his living without grazing grass. ”

XIII. धर्म—Mrs. Annie Besant in her translation of the Bhagwad Gîtâ Says: Dharma is a wide word, primarily meaning the essential nature of a thing ; hence the laws of its being, its duty; and it includes religious rites, appropriate to these laws (Vide The Lord’s Song by Annie Besant, p 21)

XVI (a) Kalpa (कल्प) generally means the end of the world or the universal destruction It is a day of Brahma consisting of 1,000 Mahâyugas each of which comprises the aggregate of the four Yugas or ages amounting to 4,320,000 years. The length of a Kalpa is therefore 4,320,000,000 years of mortals At the end of each Kalpa the existing world is totally annihilated and its place is taken by a new one.

(b) The Hindus believe that knowledge never forsakes its fortunate owner throughout his successive births Perhaps the belief in the Transmigration of souls does not need any special mention in this place

On the immortality of knowledge Mr K. T. Telang has the following

“ Comp. विद्याकुलजनवधुरिव जहाति नो जन्म जन्मा ऽ पि &c ॥ and Kumâra I 30 ”

XVII. परमार्थ—Artha (अर्थ) is interest or individual interest and Paramârtha (परमार्थ) is the highest interest or the interest of the soul

XVIII. (a) Hansa (हंस or swan)—This bird is generally believed as being gifted with the peculiar power of separating milk from water when they are mixed together and placed before it.

(b) “ The meaning of the stanza is that the swan may be unfortunate, and not have a good dwelling place, but its great inherent qualities will still remain. ” (K. T. Telang)

However, to my mind, the real meaning of the stanza is this . “ A learned man may be deprived of all his property, but no one can ever wrest from him his literary fame and reputation

XX. “ On गुरुणागुरु. the commentator has the following क्षुद्रगुरुव सर्वविद्यासम्पूर्णप्राज्ञ प्रष्टु मायान्ति स प्राज्ञो गुरुणामपि गुरु ॥ अथ च गृणाति हित मुपदिशति इति गुरु रिति गुरुपदव्याख्यानमतो हित कर्त्री विद्यैव. This is too farfetched and not free from difficulties गुरुणागुरु. is simply greatest of the great. ”

(K. T. Telang)

To me गुरुणां गुरु' is as clear as anything I take it in its ordinary sense of Guru of Gurus (teacher of teachers) or the best teacher गुरु is feminine See Pāṇini IV I 44

Kṛiṣṇa Sāstri Mahābala also explains it as विद्यैव गुरुणा मुपदेष्टृणां गृणाति हित मुपदिशतीति गुरु रूपदेश्च ।

Prof, Tawney has left out the clause altogether

XXI To understand the clause ‘ ज्ञातिश्चेदनलेन किम्’ more clearly let us see what the Sanskrita commentator says upon it ज्ञाति स्वजाति. सन्निधावस्ति चेदनलेनाग्निनाकिम्-अग्निहृत तापादिक सैव करिष्यति ॥

Mr Durga Prasad translates it thus . he needs no fire to run him who has hosts of relations to support.

XXIV (a) Here is a play upon the word रससिद्धाः which means (1) रसेषु पारदादिषु सिद्धा सज्जा इत्यर्थः as well as

(2) रसेषु शृङ्गारादिषु सिद्धा. पूर्णाः कुशला इति। “रससिद्ध—perfect in the rasas or sentiments, masters of style, capable of ruling the passions and feelings of men ” (K T Telang)

(b) Rasâs (रसाः) The nine poetical styles (or Indian muses) as enumerated by the poets are (1) the Sringâra or Erotic, (2) the Hâsya or Comic, (3) the Karunâ or Elegiac, (4) the Vîra or Heroic; (5) the Raudra or Tragic, (6) the Bhayankara or Melancholic, (7) Vaibhatsa or Satiric, (8) the Sânta, or Didactic, and (9) the Adbhuta or Sensational.

XXVI Mr Durga Prasada is far from being right and correct in translating the last line of the stanza. See Durga Prasad's English Translation of Bhartrihari's Nîtisâtaka Para 23.

XXVIII Asidhâîâ vow (असिधारव्रत) A vow to stand on the sharp edge of a sword, or a vow to keep constant company with a young and handsome woman without ever dreaming of conjugal love

XXX The point of the stanza is not that the 'pariah' is not ashamed even to eat the fleshless bone of the cow (as Prof Tawney seems to conclude) but the point is really this that the dog is not ashamed even to eat with great relish a piece of dry bone which has nothing at all to attract his attention

“The poet's meaning certainly is that a special impurity attaches to eating the flesh of the cow. But Babu Rajendra Lâl Mitra has shown that this notion is of very recent origin. It does not appear to have been prevalent in time of Bhavabhuti, who is generally placed in the eight century. So that this stanza seems to have been written at a far later date than that assigned by Prof. Lassen to the majority of Bhartrihari's poems " (Prof. Tawney)

It will not be quite clear to the reader why have I quoted at length the above note of Prof Tawney. But I will not tax his patience to tell the plain truth in the smallest possible space. There is a word गो. in the text, and this little monosyllable has furnished the learned professor with a fine clue for the solution of the much debated question of Bhartrihari's period. However I would beg to warn the general public to take it for what it is worth. Because it needs not be pointed out that in the first place the word गो. is put in merely for the sake of metre. If we take out गो. and put in some other word of equal measure (no matter, it qualifies अस्थि or not) the meaning of the ślōka will remain substantially the same without losing the least and slightest force*. Secondly, the assumption that the notion of attaching a special impurity to eating the flesh of the cow is of later origin than the time of Bhavabhūti, is quite unfounded. The sanctity of the cow is as old as the Vedas. The Rāmāyana and the Mahābhārata have numerous passages in praise of the sacred cow. " Kālidāsa in his Raghuvansā says that Dilīpa the renowned ancestor of Rāmchandra, preferred giving his own life to seeing नन्दिनी (the sacrificial cow of वशिष्ठ) devoured by a lion †

* Mr K T. Telang has found कम् to exist for गोः in no less than seven different copies of the śatakas which he has consulted for his edition of भरतृहरि, (Vide p 9 B S Series No. XI) The copies of the Hitōpadeśa, Panchatantra, and the Subhāshitāvah where the verse is quoted have also got क instead of गो. ।

† " सत्व मदीयेन शरीरवृत्ति देहेन निर्वर्तयितुं प्रसीद ।

दिनावसानोत्सुकबालवत्सा विसृज्यतां धेनुस्य महर्षेः ॥ "

(रघुवशम् । २ । ४५)

See also M₁ K T Telang's note at p. xii Bombay Sanskrit Series No xi.

XXXII. The radical meaning of the word संसार is also equivalent to what is always in motion ससरतीति ससार. । “परिवर्तिनि=revolving, rotating The allusion is to the ever-recurring birth and death in this world. पुनरपि जनन पुनरपि मरण पुनरपि जननी जठरे शयनम् are familiar verses to the same effect (They are ascribed to Sankarâchârya. See Kâvya Sangraha 35. ’ (K. T Telang.)

XXXIV (a) Râhu (रहु)–Name of a demon, son of Viprachitti and Simhikâ.

(b) For the story of Râhu's vengeance on the sun and the moon, refer to the following note of Mr F. S Growse, from his Translation of the Râmâyana of Tulsidâsa vol III.–The demon Râhu having disguised himself as one of the gods, succeeded in securing a draught of the nectar which the gods had churned out of the ocean The sun and the moon, who had detected the impostor, gave information to Vishnu, who thereupon cut off the monster's head and two of his forearms As he could not rob him of the immortality that the nectar had conferred, the severed head and tail were metamorphosed into heavenly bodies, under the names of Râhu and Ketu, or the ascending and descending node, of which the former still wreaks vengeance on the sun and the moon by now and then swallowing them.

XXXV (a) Sesha (शेष)–Name of the celebrated serpent King Bâsukî He is represented as supporting the entire world on his thousand heads or hoods Cf “ ब्रह्माण्डकुम्भकार भुजगाकार जनार्दन नौमि । स्फारेयत्फणचक्रे धरा शरावश्रिय वहति ” (गोवधनस्यार्यासप्तशती १७)

(b) Kamathapati (कमठपति). The lord of tortoises Vishnu is represented as to have assumed the form of a tortoise in order to support the serpent King Bâsuki together with the entire world upon his stalwart back Cf “ यो धत्तेशपनाग तदनुवसुमती स्वर्गपातालयुक्ता युक्ता सर्वैः समुद्रैर्हिमगिरिकनक प्रस्थमुख्यैर्नगेन्द्रैः । एतद्ब्रह्माण्ड मस्यामृत धरसदृश भाति वशे मुरारे. पायाद्भूः कूर्मदेह. प्रकटितमहिमा माधव कामरूपी ॥ ”

XXXVI It is told that the mountains were formerly furnished with wings by which they were enabled to fly from one place to another Every thing whether animate or inanimate being therefore afraid of being crushed to pieces by them fall, Indra was led to make a vow to deprive them all of this valued privilege When he began to cut off their wings by his Bagra many had to save their lives by flying into the ocean. Mamâla, the son of the Himâlayas was one of those who retained their wings by drowning themselves into the ocean who kindly gave them the desired refuge This story is told in the Sundarâkând of the Râmâyana

XXXVII. (a) इनकान्त-Sun-gem “ A kind of crystal cool to the touch, and supposed to possess fabulous properties, because like a glass lens it gave out heat when exposed to the rays of the sun ”

(Monier Williams)

(b) Mark the word pâda (पाद) in the text which means both foot and ray

XXXVIII (a) "The idea of the last line finds frequent expression in Sanskrit Literature, तेजसा सह जाताना वयः कुत्रोपयुज्यते or Kâlidâsa's तेजसा हि न वयः समीक्षते, or Bhavabhûti's गुणाः पूजास्थानं गुणिषु न च लिग न च वयः are other wellknown instances" (K T Telang)

(b) Teja-(तेज) The word is susceptible of a wide range of interpretations. It is thus defined by Bharata the father of Sanskrit Drama

अधिक्षेपापमानादे प्रयुक्तस्य परेण यत् । प्राणत्वये ऽप्यसहन तत्तेजः । समुदाहृतम् ॥ See Nâtyasâstram XXII 39.

XL M₁ Charles Wilkins' interpretation of the verse runs as follows —

"Those faculties are not injured" This is a mere saying "That judgment is unimpaired" That also is but an expression, for the moment a man is deprived of the comfort of riches, he is quite another. Is not this curious? See Fables and Proverbs from the Sanskrit Morley's Universal Library No. 30 p 70

XLVI Kalpalatâ (कल्पलता) a creeper of Indra's paradise. This heavenly plant is supposed to be able to grant all desires and hence it is also called as the wish-yielding tree

XLIX Meru (मेरु) see Note to stanza LXXX.
(a) (Nîti)

L Châtaka (चातक) a Species of partridge. Name of a bird which is supposed to live only on rain drops

"The Châtaka is fabled never to drink except it be such drops as fall in the month of October, when the sun is in the same longitude as octurus (Swâti), a time of the year when a shower is a very rare occurrence. The same precious drops if they fall into the sea are transmuted into pearls." (Mr. Growse)

Allusion is made to the latter tradition in stanza LXVII. (Nîti)

LIII It is a general belief among the people of India that there exists a certain species of snakes which bear or carry invaluable gems upon their hoods.

LVIII It must be understood that the stanza refers to the service of evil masters.

LXIV. See note to stanza XXVIII (Nîti)

LXVII. See Note to stanza L (Nîti).

LVIV. " The idea of the stanza is that all should make their choice of the alternatives stated. The two cannot be joined Cf. also the quotation at Saraswatikanthâbharana, p, 69. (Barooa's Ed.)" (Telang)

LXXIV (a) Fadma (पद्म) a species of lotus that expands in the day and closes at night.

(b) Kairava (कैरव) is the lily that blossoms in the night and fades at sunrise.

LXXVI " This stanza gives a moral aspect to the physical phenomenon of boiling milk being prevented from overflowing by water being thrown upon it " (K T Telang)

LXXVII. Keshava (केशव)—One who sleeps in water It is a name of Vishnu (विष्णु)

(b) For the lying of refugee mountains into the womb of the ocean see our Note to stanza XXXVI. supra

(c) Badavânala (बडवानल) —The submarine fire is represented in mythology as a being with a body of flame and the head of a mare which sprang from the thighs of the patriarch Urva and fell into the ocean. Badvânala is a compound word meaning mare-fire

(d) Samvarataka (सर्वतक) —a species of rains powerful enough to bring about the universal destruction by incessant downpour of heavy showers.

(e) “ According to Hindu notions the fires that are to roll every thing together and destroy the world at the time of universal destruction, are concealed beneath the sea ” See Prof. Tawney’s Three centuries of Bhartrihari p. 31 Cal. Ed.

LXXIX. Tribhuvana (त्रिभुवन) The three spheres of the universe, comprising the earth, heaven, and hell.

LXXX. (a) Hemagiri (हेमगिरे) or Sumeru (सुमेरु) The sacred mountain Meru. This celebrated golden mountain is supposed to be situated in the centre of the world, and around which the sun is said to make his daily revolutions.

(b) Rajatagiri (रजतगिरि) or Kailâsa (कैलास) —is the name of a mountain, which forms the northwestern peak of the Himâlayas and the residence of Shiva and Kuvera. This peak of the abode of Ice is supposed to be made of silver. The name silver-peak might possibly have been given to it on account of its silver-like appearance owing to the fact of its remaining covered over with ice all the year round.

(c) Malaya (मलय)—“ Name of a mountain range in Southern India, abounding in sandal trees. Poets usually represent the breeze from the malaya mountain as wafting the odour of sandal trees and other plants growing thereon, which peculiarly affects persons who are smit with love ” (Prof V S Apte). Dr Kielhorn says that Malaya is the name of a mountainous range on the Western coast of the Indian peninsula on which the best sandal wood trees grow.

(d) Kunkôla (कङ्कोल) a kind of plant “ कोलकम् । ककोलक कोशफलम् ” इत्यमरः । The commentator says कोलक-ककोलक-कोशफल त्रीणि ककोल “ गवला ” इति ख्यातस्य ।

(e) Nimba (निम्ब) is a kind of large tree very common in India. Its name in ordinary Hindustânî is Neema. Its bark, twigs, and leaves are all very bitter of taste.

(f) Kutaja (कुटज)—It is a kind of forest plant of soury taste. Its Latin name as given by the Bhâsâkâria of the Abhinavânighantu is pongamia glabrâ. See page 102 of अभिनवनिघट्टु by Pandit Dattarâma Chaube.

LXXXI (a) The churning of the ocean is one of the common place of Hindu poetry. With mount Mandara as a churning stick, the great serpent Bâsuki as a rope, and Narain himself in tortoise form as the pivot on which to work, the gods and demons combined to churn the Milky ocean ” (Mr Growse).

(b) The fourteen jewels churned out of the ocean are thus enumerated in the popular stanza of the Mangalâshataka which is attributed to Kâlidâs लक्ष्मी-

कौस्तुभ पारिजातक सुरा धन्वन्तरि श्रन्द्रमा । गाव. कामदुधा. सुरेश्वरगजो
 रम्भादि देवाङ्गना. । अश्व. सप्तमुखो विषं हरिधनु. शखोऽमृत चाम्बुधे, रत्नानीह चतुर्दश प्रतिदिन कुर्यु सदा मङ्गलम् ॥ २ ॥ e they are (1) the goddess of wealth or beauty, (2) a gem worn by Vishnu, (3) the tree of paradise, (4) wine, (5) the physician of the gods, (6) the moon, (7) the cow of plenty, (8) Indra's elephant, (9) the heavenly nymphs, (10) the seven mouthed horse, (11) poison, (12) the bow of Vishnu, (13) the sacred couch and
 (14) nectar

LXXXIV Yuga (युग) An age of the world
 The yugas are four in number viz, the Satyayuga
 (the golden age), the Tretâyuga (the silver age), the Dwâparayuga (the brazen age) and the Kaliyuga the iron age) The duration of each is said to be sepectively 1,728,000 , 1,296,000 , 864,000 , and 420,000 years of men It is also supposed that the regularly descending length of the Yugas represents a corresponding physical and moral deterioration in the people who live during each age

LXXXV. Dava (दैव) “ पूर्वं जन्म कृतं कर्म त दैव मिति कथ्यते ”

LXXXVIII (a) Vrihaspati (बृहस्पति) He is the regent of the planet Jupiter, and preceptor of the gods ” (Porf Tawney's Bhartrihari, p 35)

(b) Airâwata (ऐरावत) is the name of India's elephant It is one of the fourteen jewels See note to stanza LXXXI (b) (Nîti)

LXXXIX. Karma (कर्म) Here mans fate or the certain consequence of the acts done in a former

XC “The fact of the tree being the ताल (Palm) adds to the force of the lines as it gives little or no shade.” (K. T. Telang)

XCI. (a) I think there is no necessity of pointing out that the Karira bush has no leaves all the year round that the owl is doomed not to see in day light and that the Châtaka is believed to drink no water except the drops of October showers.

(b) Karira (करीर) a thorny plant in the woods eaten by camels and goats It remains leafless at all seasons of the year.

(c) Châtaka (चातक) See note to stanza L (Nîti)

XCV. (a) It needs not be told that Brahmâ is believed by the Hindus to be the Creator of the universe, Vishnu to have assumed the ten incarnations and Mahâdeva to be an ascetic. The ten incarnations of Visnu are those of Fish, Tortoise, Boar, Man-lion, Vâman (Dwârf), Parasûrâma, Râmachandra, Krishna, Buddha and Kalki.

(b) The author in common with a large majority of Indian poets evidently believes that it is the Sun who revolves round the Earth, but, on the contrary, scientific men both before and after him have proved it beyond doubt that the Earth revolves round the Sun and not vice versa

(c) “ ब्रह्माण्डभाण्डोदरे ” is a common expression Comp. Vnucharita, p. 17, or Sahityadarpana, p 97 The allusion is to the story of Brahmâ coming out of the primordial egg, the two halves of which then became Heaven and Earth See Mauu, I st 11, 12, 13 and and Matsya Purâna, II, 28, et seq Prof. Tawney (Indian Antiquary, Vol IV, p, 264) refers to Anistophanes for the same idea (See his Bhairavi, p 38) ” (K. T. Telang)

ब्रह्माण्ड means the egg of Brahman i. e. the whole universe.

XCIX. आविपत्ते. is rendered by Dr. Peterson as “ to the bitter end ”.

C. (a) Arla (अर्क) plants generally abound in wild growth on the Indian soil

(b) Kôdriava (कोद्रव) is the paspalum fulmenta-ceum or Scrobiculatum which bears a small grain of inferior quality, eaten only by the poor.

(c) “कर्मभूमि: This world is often so called The idea is somewhat similar to that of Bishop Butler, who calls this a world for man’s probation See Râmâyan (Bomb Ed) Ayôdhyâkânda, CIX, 28
(p. 205), कर्मभूमि मिमां प्राप्य कर्तव्य कर्म यच्छुभम्. See also Muir, V., 325 (Ed 1870), कर्मभूमि रिय ब्रह्म न्फलभूमि रसौ मत्ता which fixes the meaning precisely.....
The idea expressed in the several analogies in the first three lines is that of good things misapplied.
Thus तिलखली is a very worthless stuff to be cooked in a pot of the Vaidiyya precious stone with sandal wood fuel ; a golden ploughshare similarly is misapplied if used in digging up the ground for the अर्क root which is of little value, and so is a collection of कर्पूर trees if it is cut down to make a hedge around a field where कोद्रव is grown, this being a very coarse and poor sort of gram This is exactly the idea of the fourth line also The opportunities given by birth in this world are lost when तपस is not practised. The अर्क is mentioned in the familiar proverb अर्के चे न्मधुविन्देते किमर्थं पर्वतं ब्रजेत्. ” (K. T. Telang)

CI (a) Meru (मेरु)—See Note to stanza LXXX (a) (Niti).

(b) “ A man may do the most difficult and dangerous things in order to do what is fated not to happen or to avoid what is fated to happen. But he will fail ” (K T Telang).

CIX. Meru (मेरु)—See Note (a) to stanza LXXX. (Nitti)

ŚRINGĀRAŚATAKA.

A. As to the second place being given to the Śringāraśataka Kṛṣṇa Śāstri Mahābala says :—

श्रीमद्राजर्षिं प्रवरो भर्तृहरि शृङ्गारस सेवनमपि नीतिपूर्वकमेव कर्तव्यं न तद्वि- रुद्ध मिति सूचयन् प्रथम नीति ज्ञानाय नीतिशतक कृत्वा ततः शृङ्गारसस्य
परिणामे वैराग्यजनकत्वात्कचिद्व्यत्येन क्वचिदुपादेयत्वेनादौ त वर्णयित्वा पश्चा
द्वैराग्य वर्णयिष्यामीति मनसि निधाय शृङ्गारशतक प्रारिप्सु रित्यादि—

B Śringāra (शृङ्गार)—“ पुनार्योरन्योन्यरक्तयो रति प्रकृतिः शृङ्गार । ” See रुद्रकृतवाव्यालङ्कार XII-5. It is thus defined in the Rasaratnahāra of Śivarāma :

“ स्त्री पुंसयो र्मिथो राग वृद्धि शृङ्गार उच्यते ”. See श्रीत्रिपाठि शिवराम प्रणीत रसरत्नहारः ६ ।

According to another authority Śringāra is defined as follows :—

रम्यदेशकलाकालवेषभोगादिसेवनै । प्रमोदात्मारति. सैव यूनोरन्योन्य
सक्तयो. ॥ ग्रह्यमाणा शृङ्गारो मधुराङ्गविचेष्टिते । अयोगो विप्रयोगश्च सभोगश्चेति स त्रिधा ॥

See Śāhityasārasaṅgraha, by Moreshwara Rāmchandra Kāle, B A, p 55.

Śringāra is derived thus. शृङ्ग हि मन्मथोद्भेदस्तदागमन
हेतुकः । पुरुषप्रमदाभूमिः शृङ्गार इति गीयते ।

To sum up all these, we have to say that Śringgāra or the Erotic deals with the rise, growth and development of mutual love and attachment between man and woman

I. (d) Brahmā, Vishnu and Śiva form the Hindu Trinity. Brahmā is generally known as the Creator, Vishnu, the Protector, and Śiva the Destroyer of the world.

(b) Kusumâyudha (कुसुमायुध)—Name of the god of love. so called on account of the fact of his weapon being made of flowers.

II. Bhâra (भाव)—Generally speaking Bhâvas are the different kinds of feelings and emotions that rise into the minds of women at the time of seeing youthful persons of the opposite sex. In dramatic science or in poetic compositions generally, Bhâvas are either (स्थायिन्) primary or (व्यभिचारिन्) subordinate.

According to Bharata वाग्ङ्गसत्त्वोपेतान्काव्यार्थान्भावयन्तीति भावा । तत्राद्यौ भावाः स्थायिन । त्रयस्त्रिंशच्चभिचारिणः । अद्यौ सात्विका । एवमेते काव्यरसाभिव्यक्तिहेतव एकोनपञ्चाशद्भावाः प्रत्यवगन्तव्याः । एभ्यश्च सामान्यगुणयोगेन रसा निष्पद्यन्ते । See भरतमुनि प्रणीतनाट्यशास्त्रम् ; ७ अध्याय ।

Mr. Moreshwara Rámchandra Kále says:—Bhâva is the complete pervasion of the heart by any feeling whether of pleasure or of pain arising from the objects under sight. It is derived from भावन or वासन scnt i. e. that which gives its own smell to other things &c See Moreshwara R Kále's Sáhitya-sâra Sangraha p, 44.

III. Lilâ (लीला)—Sportive manner Lilâ is one of the three physical embellishments of a young lady. The other two are Bhâra (भाव) and Hâra (हाव).

IV Diśa (दिशः)—The ten directions of the world. See our Note to stanza I (b). (Niti).

VI. Vilâsa (विलासः)—Conversation with a smiling face. Also refer to Note on stanza C infra

X (a) Abalâ (अबलाः) means powerless. It is a special designation of women. Compare the use of the epithet 'weaker sex' in English.

(b) Indra (इन्द्र) was smitten with love at the sight of Ahalyâ (अहल्या) the wife of Gautama (गौतम) The story is told both in the Bhâgawata and the Râmâyana

XI. मकरध्वज is the god with the emblem of makara (मकर), a kind of sea animal generally a fish. It is an epithet of Cupid

XII The real beauty of the slôka lies in the nice pun upon the words सयमिनः, श्रुतेः, द्विजानां, and मुक्तानां Also see our foot-note to this stanza.

Besides the words explained at the foot-note to this verse, the word पारंगते is also susceptible of two interpretations (1) have gone to the extreme end of, and (2) have mastered completely

XIII (a) Mugdha (मुग्धा) is a special epithet applied to young ladies blooming into youth It is thus defined by a well known writer on Sringâra—
मुग्धा नववयः कामा रतौ वामा मृदुः कृधि ।

(b) The exquisite beauty of the stanza lies in the ingenious play on the word गुणै which equally stands for (1) bow-strings, and (2) mental, moral and personal qualifications

XIV The learned editors of the Subhâshitâvali (Bombay Sanskrit Series No XXXI) remark on this couplet that the old reading ताराखिन्दुषु introduces the sun, which has no business here However I would like to adhere to the reading ताराखिन्दुषु, because the thought would thereby be considerably stronger and more beautiful and poetical, inasmuch as one away from his lady love is naturally inclined to take the world to be full of darkness both in day and night. Night is really dark in comparison with day, and there is neither poetry nor beauty in alluding to its gloom. The sense would be much weakened by confining the idea of darkness to night with which it is always associated. The line " तद्वि- श्लेषरुजान्धकारितमिदं दग्धं दिनं कल्पितम् " in Kālidāsa's Vikramaurvaṣī supports our view by keeping the word दिन in the stanza.

XV. Here too we find a very ingenious pun upon the words (उद्धृतः, तरले, चले, राग-, and मध्यस्था which may either be taken in their literal or secondary senses

XVI. In this stanza the author has availed himself of the double meanings of the words गुरु, चन्द्र, भास्वर and शनैश्चर, which respectively mean both Jupiter and weighty, moon and bright, sun and luminous, and Saturn and slowmoving. Without fully understanding the double meanings of these words, the poet's exquisite comparison of woman with the well-known planetary group will be quite obscure and nonsense

XVIII (a) Arya (आर्य)—Generally speaking it means an Aryan. But in its special sense it is confined to an inhabitant of Aryāvarta or India proper, in contradistinction to the aborigines. In Sanskrit compositions आर्य is usually applied to a man of learning and respectable family Here it stands for a learned man Pandit Vaidyanâtha in his Udâharana Chandrikâ (उदाहरण चन्द्रिका) when commenting on this stanza explains व्याख्याः by विद्वांसः i. e. learned men

(b) Vaidyanâtha in his Udâharanachandrikâ (उदाहरणचन्द्रिका) after explaining the stanza adds : अत्र वाच्यः संशयः । व्यङ्ग्यस्तु शान्तं शृंगार्यन्यतरं गतं निश्चय इति स्वरूपवैलक्षण्यम् ।

XIX. Tatwagyâna (तत्त्वज्ञान)—Knowledge of the Essence of things

XX. (a) Here again we meet the same ingenious play upon the words चंद्रकान्त, महानील and पद्मराग which respectively mean both moonstone or moonlike sapphire or dark-blue and ruby or rosy.

(b) It may be noted with pleasure that Varâhamihira goes even a step further when he asserts that it is the women who adorn gems, and not the gems that adorn women ; because women can enslave the hearts of men without the help of gems, but gems can never be said to possess a like power without the company of women's handsome persons The original text runs as follows —

रत्नानि विभूषयन्ति योषा भूष्यन्ते वनिता न रत्नकान्त्या ।

चेतो वनिता हरन्त्यरत्ना नोरत्नानि विनाऽङ्गनाऽङ्ग सद्भात् ॥

Vide वाराहीसहिता । LXXIII. 2.

XXI (a) Vâmanayana (वामनयना)—Women are generally so called on account of their natural habit of looking at men with side glances

(b) Dr J Taylor in his translation of the Prabôdhachandrikâ (प्रबोधचंद्रिका) renders the verse as follows.—

When a woman by deceitful glances penetrates the tender heart of a man, what power does she not possess ! She fascinates him, she sports with him, teases him, frowns on him, fills him with eager desires and mocks him

XXII. In this stanza the poet speaks of a delicate lady separated from her lover. Every word is so dexterously put as to successfully impress the extraordinary tenderness of her delicate frame. Not to speak of the sun, she is even unable to bear the rays of the moon. She walks very slowly her paces are guided by her feminine strength, she stops and takes rest in the shade of trees, and in order to protect her uncommonly delicate face from the effects of the moon's rays she draws up her veil against them

XXIV. Suarga (स्वर्ग) is heaven or India's paradise.

XXVIII. (a) Govinda in his Kāvya-pradīpa and Vaidyanāth in his Udāharaṇachandrikā say that कृत is अधिक i. e. more than justified by the छन्द of the stanza.

(b) Under the particulars in which the stanza is cited by Śārngadhara in his Śārngadhara-paddhati one would be led to agree with him in taking the verse to be the joint production of शीलमट्टारिका and भोजराज—I shall therefore prefer to read इदमपि for यदपिच in the 3rd charana

XXXII Māna (मान) is anger excited by jealousy (especially in women)

XXXIII (a) Henceforward the poet begins to describe the six well-known seasons of the year .

viz, (1) Vasanta or Spring, (2) Grishma or Summer, (3) Vaishâ or Rains, (4) Sharat or Autumn, (5) Hima or Winter (6) Shushra or Early Spring respectively giving 5, 3, 6, 1, 1, and 2 stanzas to each of them

(b) मधौ=चैत्रे । “ स्याच्चैत्रे चैत्रको मधु. ” इत्यमरः । As it (मधु) is one of the two months of Spring, it here stands for the whole of that lovely season

XXXV (a) चैत्र is the first month of the Vikrami Samvat

(b) It may be confidently noted here that the description we find in the stanzas numbered 35, 38, 39, 40 and 48 very strongly corroborates the belief that their author must either be a king or one well-versed with kingly surroundings

XXXVI (a) Pâtala (पाटल) “ is the Bignonia or Stereospermum Seneceol, a large tree common in South India. with dark dull crimson, exquisitely fragrant flowers ” (Mr. Growse).

(b) श्रीखण्डशैल is another name of Malayâchala. According to Prof. Apte it is one of the seven principal chains of mountains in India. It is most probably to be identified with the southern portion of the Ghâts running from the south of Mysore, and forming the eastern boundary of Travancore See also our note to stanza LXXX (c) in the Nitisataka.

XLI. (a) The poet here compares the rainy season to a youthful woman All the attributes are so chosen as to qualify both the rainy season and young lady.

(b) Jāti (जाति or जाती)—A species of flower-plant known as the Jasmine.

XLII (a) Kutaja (कुटज)—See Note to stanza LXXX (†) in the Nīṭisataka

(b) Kadamba (कदम्ब)—A kind of large tree with beautiful fragrant flowers. It blossoms in the rains. Hence it is spoken of by poets as budding at the roaring of thunder clouds.

XLIV. Ketakī (केतकी)—Name of a plant usually growing near water. The scent of its flowers usually called Smā is very strong and lasting. It usually puts forth its blossoms in the beginning of the rainy season.

XLV. Nabhas (नभस् or श्रावण) is the fifth month of the Vikramī Samvat श्रावण together with भाद्रपद the month next following it, forms the rainy season.

XLIX Vita (विट)—Generally speaking a paramour or voluptuary or sensualist. In dramatic literature Vita is the companion of a prince or dissolute young man, or of a courtizan. He is described as being skilled in the arts of singing, music and poetry, and as a parasite on familiar terms with his associate to whom he nearly serves the purpose of Vidūshaka (विदूषक).

L. Sītkār is the making of an inarticulate sound by drawing in the air between the closed lips

LI अन्तस्तत्त्व is the allpervading essence of things; e. Brahma

LII Vedānta (वेदान्त) literally means the end of the Vedas. Vedānt refers to that system of philosophy which deals with the ultimate end of the Vedas, teaches the pantheistic creed of the Hindus, and preaches the profound doctrine that Brahma is the only Truth and that the world is a mere delusion

LIV. Lôkas (लोक) — The lôkas (worlds or spheres) are fourteen in number, seven above, and seven below. See Note to stanza XXII (c) in the Vairâgyasataka

LVII. The Apsarâs or the heavenly nymphs are one of the fourteen jewels that were churned out of the ocean. Also refer to our Note to stanza LXXXI (b) in the Nitiśataka. The radical meaning of the word अप्सरा is a dweller of water, hence a Naid. The names of the principal Apsarâs are उर्वशी, मेनका, रम्भा, तिलोत्तमा &c &c

LIX. Dr. Peterson in his note on stanza 2246 of the Subhâshitâvali says that this verse is quoted in the Hitôpadeśa (हितोपदेश) but the verse is nowhere to be found in that work. Strange it is that it cannot be traced out even in his own edition of the Hitôpadeśa

LX. Brahmâ is the Creator. See also Note on stanza. I (a) supra.

LXI. Pancheshu (पञ्चेषु) — Name of the god of love, so called on account of his being represented as the holder of five arrows.

Cf — “ अरविद मशोक च नूतं च नवमल्लिका । नीलोत्पल च पञ्चैते पञ्चबाणा प्रकीर्तिता ॥ ” or “ समोहनोन्मादनौ च शोषणस्तापन स्तथा । स्तभन श्रेणि कामस्य पञ्चबाणाः प्रकीर्तिता ॥ ”

In other words the five arrows of Cupid are thus enumerated by poets either to be the flowers of the lotus, aśôka, mango, Jasmine and blue lotus, or the acts of ravishing, maddening, drying up (or emaciating), heating (or paining) and stupefying.

LXIV At page 74 of the Bombay Sanskrit Series No 1, D. G. Bühler, C. I. E., has the following note on this stanza. नम्रीकृता मुण्डिताः, these two words describe the Jain and Bauddha ascetics—रक्तपटी कृता. '(have been dressed in red rags)' Red clothes are also the marks of Smâta ascetics. कापालिका. 'scull-wearers' This is the name of certain disreputable worshippers of Devî, see H. H. Wilson's Works, Vol 1, pp 21 and 264. The verse satirically represents asceticism as a consequence of the anger of Cupid.

LXV (a) Visuâmitra (विश्वामित्र)—Name of an illustrious sage, who though born a Kshatriya attained ब्रह्मत्व by virtue of his hard penances. He was smitten with love at the sight of Menakâ (मेनका) who was sent by Indra to spoil his rigid devotions. Menakâ bore him a daughter afterwards known as Sakuntalâ the story of whose love and marriage with Dushyanta forms the subject of Kâlidâsa's immortal drama entitled " Śakuntalâ".

(b) Parâsara (पराशर)—Name of a celebrated sage, the father of Vyâsa, the well-known compiler of the Vedâs. Parâsara is said to have fallen in love with a fisher woman named Satyavati who bore him the celebrated Vyâsa before her marriage to Santanu. Parâsara is the author of a smṛiti called after him Parâsarasmṛiti.

(c) Vindhya (विन्ध्य)—Name of the great mountainous range known as the Vindhya mountains separating the Dekkan from India proper.

LXVII (a) Siddha (सिद्ध) A semi-divine being supposed to be of great purity and holiness, and said to be particularly characterized by eight supernatural faculties called Siddhis

“ The miraculous powers that can be acquired by perfect saints or Siddhas, are reckoned as eight in number, and are called, Animâ, Mahimâ, Garimâ, Laghimâ, Prâpti, Prâkâmya, Ishitva, and Wâshitva. The words denote the faculty—1st of becoming infinitely small; 2nd of becoming infinitely great, 3rd of becoming infinitely heavy, 4th of becoming infinitely light; 5th of obtaining whatever one wishes; 6th of doing whatever one wishes; 7th of absolute supremacy, and 8th of absolute subjugation ”

(Mr. Growse.)

(b) हस्वप is the bull of Hara i. e. Śiva. Its most popular name is Nandi (नन्दी), and it is the vehicle of Śiva

LXX नरक is hell or the region of Pluto. Mythology believes in numerous hells, and hence the phrase नरकश्चत dc. in the text. Each peculiar hell has its peculiar punishments, horrors, and pains especially designed for the particular class of sinners that are doomed to enter it. Different authorities give different numbers of hells. But their number is popularly confined to twenty-one.

LXXI. (a) Sringâra (शृङ्गार)—See our Note B. supra.

(b) Chakôra (चकोर)—The chakôra or partridge is supposed to be very fond of looking at the resplendent moon. It is therefore generally spoken of as drinking the mellifluous nectar of the lunar rays.

LXXII "Inflamed by passion, even wise men beholding woman, who is the daughter of impurity, address her in tender language. ' O Charmer, thy large eyes are like the water-lily ; thy lips are full and round, thy protuberant breasts touch each other, thy beautiful mouth resembles the lotus and elegant are thine eyebrows' Viewing her in this manner, their passions are inflamed, they are transported with desire and follow the dictates of lust". See Dr J Taylor's Prabôdhachandôdaya, p 50

LXXVI (a) स्वर्गद्वार is gate of heaven or the Indra's paradise

(b) नरकपुर region of hell Also refer to our Note on stanza LXX. supra

LXXVIII. Here again we have a very ingenious play upon the word रम which equally means red colour and affection

LXXX. In this stanza the poet has given us a very graphic description of the fickleness of woman's love

LXXXI. On हृदय मुष्टिभि रेव ताड्यते Dr Keilhorn remarks as follows -

' The heart is beaten with fists ' (as it were to punish it for its malignancy and venomousness.

LXXXII. मन्त्रिणः In India there is to be found a certain class of persons reputed to possess the Gârudî Vidyâ by which they can cure snake-bites merely by the repetition of some charms or Mantras They are generally known as snake-charmers or Gârudîs.

It must be known that Garuda (the eagle) is the deadly enemy of all sorts of snakes.

LXXXIII. (a) Here we have got a very beautiful and striking metaphor in which the god of love is represented as a skilful fisherman, woman as his net, world as sea, female lips as tempting bait, men as fish and love as fire

(b) Makaraketana (मकरकेतन) — See Note to stanza XI. supra It is also necessary to say that Ketu and Dhuaja are equivalent in sense

LXXXV The words व्यादीर्घेण &c which are adjectives qualifying अहिना (अहि snake) are also to be taken as attributes of चक्षुषा (चक्षु=eye) An attempt is made in the translation of the stanza to clear the simile by using appropriate separate epithets for serpent on the one hand and eye on the other LXXXVIII. In Sanskrit a prostitute is very appropriately called a परण्यस्त्री or marketwoman, because she sells her person to her customers.

XC. (a) चेट—According to Bharata, Cheta is thus defined

कलाप्रियो बहुकथो विरूपो गन्धसेवकः । मान्यामान्यविशेषज्ञश्चेतो ह्येव विधः स्मृतः । See Bharata's Nātya-Sastra XXIV. 107

(b) Vita (विटः) — “वेश्योपचार कुशलो मधुरो दक्षिणः कविः ऊहा पोह क्षमो वाग्मी चतुरश्च विटो भवेत् ।” (भरत नाट्यशास्त्रम् । २४।१०४)

Also refer to our note on stanza XLIX supra

XCII. (a) Priyangu (प्रियङ्गु) Name of a creeper which is said to put forth blossoms at the touch of women's feet.

(b) Kunda (कुन्द) a kind of Jasmine (white and delicate)

(c) मन्दार is the coral tree. It is one of the five trees in Indra's paradise. The word Mandâra is also used for Aśoka and Dhattūra plants.

(d) Yamasadana (यमसदन)—The palace of Yama, the god of death is spoken of as extending over many leagues in the Garudapurâna.

XCIV. The same note as that appended to stanza XXXV. (b) may appropriately be repeated here with increased confidence.

XCV. Here is a very ingenious play upon all the adjectives of भ्रुविक्षेप (play of the eyebrows), for, they can also be applied to the word खल (a perverse person). But unfortunately the beauty of the original cannot be preserved in the translation.

XCVII. (a) Wife is generally considered by men as the other half of her husband. Compare the often quoted lines of Milton in the 4th book of his Paradise Lost where Adam thus addresses Eve

“Whom fly'st thou? whom thou fly'st, of him thou art,

His flesh, his bone; to give thee being I lent
Out of my side to thee, nearest my heart, Substantial life, to have thee by my side
Henceforth an individual solace dear;
Part of my soul, I seek thee and thee claim,
My other half”

(b) “प्रियतमा &c alludes to the idea that Siva and Pârvatî form a single body, one half of which is male and the other half female न यस्मात्परः=to whom there is no superior. The two lines mean that Śiva though he is so far under the dominion of Love as to have his wife as one-half of himself, is also the first to withstand love. Cf Kirâta XVIII. 31." (K. T. Telang.)

(c) पार्वती literally means the daughter of a mountain. It is one of the several names of Durgâ,

Cf 'उमा कात्यायनी गौरी काली हैमवतीश्वरी । शिवा भवानो रुद्राणी शर्वाणी सर्व मङ्गला ॥ अपर्णा पार्वती दुर्गा मृडानी चण्डिका म्बिका॥' इत्यमरः

XCVIII. (a) Vairâgya (वैराग्य) is asceticism or detachment from the world. See also our Note B in the Vaiâgyasataka

(b) Nîti (नीति) is motives of policy and prudence including morality. See also our Notes B and C in the Nîtisataka.

(c) Smîngûna (शृङ्गार) is the first and most important of the nine Rasas and deals with man and woman and their mutual love, as members of the opposite sexes

(d) The point of the stanza evidently is this : people generally differ very widely in their delights and pursuits

वेदा विभिन्नाः स्मृतयो विभिन्ना नासौ मुनि र्यस्य मत न भिन्नम् ।

धर्मस्य तत्त्वं निहित गुहायां महाजनो येन गत. स पथा ॥

C. (a) Vilâsa (विलास) is thus defined by Bharata : स्मितपूर्वमयालापो विलास इति कीर्तितः । See Bharata's Nâtya sâstra XXII. 33

(b) The real meaning of the stanza seems to be that the amorous sports and lovely conversations of youthful ladies are always powerful to charm men

NOTES ON VAIRAGYA SATAKA

A As to giving the third or last place to, Vairâgyaśataka Krishna Sâstî Mahâbala says अथ श्रीमद्राज-पिम्बरो भर्तृहरि द्वितीय परिणामे वैराग्यजनकं, शृङ्गारशतक विधायेदानी वैरा- ग्यशतकं चिकीर्षु वैराग्यफलस्य दाता शिवापेक्षयान्यो नास्तीति त वर्णयति ।

B. Vaiûgya (वैराग्य) literally means absence of affection for the world See also Note to stanza XCVIII (a) in the Śingârâśataka

I Yogi (योगी) one well-versed in the practice of Yoga (योग) or union Mrs Annie Besant renders the word योग as harmony with the Divine Will.

II There are three classes of men those who have knowledge and they do not care for other people's learning through envy ; those who have no knowledge and they cannot appreciate ; and those who have high position in the world and they do not care for learning, being proud of their greatness
So that there is altogether but a bad lookout for learning and learned men " (K T Telang)

III The Vedânta philosophy teaches us that the acquisition of स्वर्ग itself is of very small importance when compared to मोक्ष or final absolution or emancipation of the soul.

VIII " The sense is that if a man of strong mind did not see his wife in the state described, he should not go about to beg It is the family that constrains him to it " (K T Telang)

It will be seen that the translation of the stanza as rendered by me is somewhat different from the above Prof Tawney's version is also similar to that of Mr K T Telang Here I have preferred to follow the Sanskrit Commentary of Kīrṣṇa Sâstri Mahâbala which gives the purport as विचारवान्जनः पूर्वाद्धोक्त विशेषण विशिष्टां भार्यां दृष्ट्वाऽपि दृष्टजठरभरणार्थं कस्याप्यग्रे न याचत इति भावः । The thought thus expressed is far nobler than that explained by Prof Tawney or Mr Telang I am, however, glad to observe that Mahârâja Sewâi Pratâpa Singhji's version of this Ślôka is quite to the point It runs as follows —

फट्यो पुरानो चीर ताहि खेचत अरु फारत ।

छोटे मोटे बाल भूख ही भूख पुकारत ।

घर मांही नहीं अन्न नारि हू निर्दय यातें ।

भई महा जडरूप कळू मुख कढति न वाते ।

यह दशा देखि अर वरत चित जीभ थरथर तरकत सुख ।

अपने सुजरे उदरहित ' देहि ' कहें को सतपुरुष ॥

Mr Durgâ Prasad's translation of this stanza being neither correct nor good deserves no particular mention in this place. The anonymous copy of the Proverbial Philosophy of Bhartihari here follows, as usual with it, the Notes of Mr K. T Telang

X. (a) It is a general belief among the people that snakes can live without feeding upon anything but an. The fact is often alluded to by Sanskrit poets. Cf सर्पा पिबन्ति पवनं न च दुर्बलास्ते &c.

(b) " The meaning is that there is no scope for the exercise of one's merits, all the energies being absorbed in the struggle for existence. "

K T. Telang

XV. The word अम्बरखण्ड is here used in a double sense of (1) a piece of cloth and (2) cloud.

XVII Commentators differ in their interpretation of this stanza

The difficulty particularly lies in the construction of the third line, which Mr Telang takes to mean—'wretched by reason of the strong distractions of the enjoyment of greatness old through age'.

Mr Durgâ Prasâda interprets the verse as follows —

"Avarice rises with selfishness or bad discrimination, goes with its extinction and culminates with its excess. When the king of gods falls a victim to it, being tempted under the irresistible promptings of biting destitution and old age, there is no talking of man."

The following version of the Slôka is found in the Proverbial Philosophy of Bhartrihari :—

"The desire for worldly pleasures is allayed as restraint full of discrimination develops and when attachment to objects of sense is great that effect takes place on a wider scale. The Lord of Gods Himself becomes subject to desire, wretched by reason of strong distraction of enjoyment of greatness old through age."

Prof Tawney's poetical version runs thus :

"As knowledge grows, content expands, and fell desire abates ;

But worldly joys, if long embraced, a baneful influence gain ;

Thus Indra, like a mortal king, hopes, trembles, loves and hates,

From having held through endless years an undisputed reign "

I have not been able to find out its version in Maharaja Pratāpa Singhji's Chhappayas. Pandit Rishabhadatta's Hindi translation is usually below the average and hence I have no scruples to omit it here.

The sage commentary of Kṛiṣṇa Sāstrī Mahābala which seems to give the correct sense of the text by his comments upon the stanza is as follows .—

विवेकस्य व्याकोशो विकसन यस्मि तस्मिन् शमे विदधति कुर्वति सति, तुङ्गे उन्नते तृष्णाया. परिष्वङ्ग आश्लेषे शाम्यति सति, सा परिणतिः सुखविशेषरूपः परिणामः प्रसरति तत्र मतिशयेन विस्तार प्राप्नोति । साका । यस्यां परिणतौ विषये जरया जीर्णं मैश्वर्यं, यसन अत्रादि भक्षण तन्निमित्तो गहनो गम्भीरो य आक्षेपो निन्दा च ताभ्या कृपण एव विधो मरुतां देवा नामधिपतिरिन्द्रो ऽ पि यस्यां परिणतौ तृष्णापात्र तृष्णाभाजन भवतीति । यस्यां परिणतौ विषये साक्षादिन्द्रो ऽ पि स्पृहां करोतीत्यर्थः ।

XVIII. Commenting on the meaning of the word Prof Tawncy remarks—“ More literally retinue, attendants This expression falls in with the legend that Bhartrihari was a king and quitted his throne in a fit of disgust. ”

XXII (a) For the unparalleled munificence and magnanimity of Paraśurāma,

Of. कुलाचलायस्य महीं द्विजेभ्यः प्रयच्छतः सीमदृषत्व मापु. ।

बभूवु कत्सर्गजल समुद्रा. स रैणुकेय. श्रियमातनोतु ॥

(b) Bali (बलि)—Name of a demon king, grandson of Prahlāda and the most powerful sovereign of his day. He wrested everything from the gods and reigned absolutely supreme over the whole world. To secure the gods from this catastrophe Vishnu, in the form of a dwarf, came to him and begged of him three steps of ground. This simple request being granted Vishnu assumed an enormous size, covered all of Bali's possessions in two of his steps and putting the third on Bali himself sent him to the Patâla where he is believed to reign still. The story is told in the Bhâgavata.

(c) Of the fourteen spheres, seven are above the Earth and seven below it. They are enumerated as follows -

(1) भूर्लोक, भुवर्लोक, स्वर्लोक, महर्लोक, जनलोक, तपलोक and सत्यलोक; (2) अतल, वितल, सुतल, रसातल, महातल, तलातल and पाताल ।

XXIV. The first two lines of the stanza if translated literally would stand thus 'What honour is it to kings to have obtained the earth which has not even for an instant remained unenjoyed by multitudes of kings after acquiring it by means of hundreds of battles'

K T. Telang.

XXVI "The following lines of Juvenal may be compared -

'What's Rome to me, what business have I there
I who can neither lie nor falsely swear,
Nor praise my patron's undeserving rhymes'
(Ancient Classics for English Readers, p 73)

Prof Tawncy (Indian Antiquary, Vol V. p 3) quotes Burke, Vol II, p. 106 (Bohn's Ed). The implication is that those persons only who can descend to such occupations find entertainment in the royal household "

XXXI जह्कन्या or जाह्नवी is an epithet of the Ganges See Râmâyana Ch XLIII Book I.

XXXII Chintâmani (चिन्तामणि) is a fabulous gem supposed to yield to its possessor all desires It is generally known as the philosopher's stone.

XXXV स्वः सिधु (literally heavenly river) is another name of the Ganges.

XXXVIII (a) "The two words काल and काली seem to me here to signify the male and female personifications of the Destructive Principle. Now काल is given by the Mcdnikâra as a name of Mahâkâla or Mahâdeva काली is well known to be a name of Pârvatî. Mahadeva is the Deity of Destruction and is also represented in the Purânas as playing with Pârvatî." K T. Telang.

Siva and Pârvatî are represented as playing chess with dice in the seven Slôkas (Nos 123-129) quoted from Mayûra in the Subhâshitâvalî See also the learned editors' note at p 8. Bombay Sanskrit Series No XXXI The word काल in Sanskrit is derived from the root कल् to count and hence it means one who counts In its secondary sense काल is used both for Time and Śiva. Time is undoubtedly the Counter and hence destroyer of all things and Siva is the deity of destruction So there is nothing strange in its being a name both of Time and Śiva काली is the feminine of काल and consequently represents both Death and Pârvatî

(b) For similarity of thought, compare the various passages quoted by Prof. Tawney in his Two Centuries of Bhartrihari, p 69.

XL (a) केशवमिश्र after quoting the stanza at page 75 of his अलङ्कारशेखर thus remarks . त्रैण स्त्रीसमूहः । अत्र अहिरिव हारो हेयो नतु हार वदहि रप्युपादेय इति बोध्यम् ॥

(b) Govinda in his काव्यप्रदीप cites it as an example of शान्तिरस According to him and the author of उदाहरणचन्द्रिका—" वा शब्दाभ्यां द्वयोर्द्वयो स्तुल्यता द्योत्यते "

XLI. "Yōga is one of the systems of Hindu philosophy. Its chief aim is to teach the means by which the human soul may obtain complete union with the Supreme Being. It is defined by Patanjali, the founder of the school, as "the prevention of the modifications of thought by the practice of self-mortification and by keeping the mind continually unaffected by all external influence." * The final beatitude which is held out as the reward of such devotion, consists in the cessation of all idea of self and of any distinction between matter and spirit" Mr. Growse.

See also our Note on stanza I supra.

(b) Padmāsana (पद्मासन) is thus defined in the Hathayōgapradīpikā (हठयोगप्रदीपिका) of Swātmārāma Yogīndra (स्वात्मारामयोगीन्द्र) —

वामोरूपरि दक्षिण च चरण संस्थाप्य वाम तथा दक्षोरूपरि पश्चिमेन विधिना धृत्वा कराभ्यां दृढम् । अंगुष्ठौ हृदये निधाय चिबुक नासाग्र मालोक्ये देतद्व्याधिविनाशकारि यमिनां पद्मासनं प्रोच्यते ॥

Mr. Srinivās Iyāngār, B. A. translates the above as follows —

'Place the right heel at the root of the left thigh and the left heel at the root of the right, cross the hands behind the back and take hold of the toes, the right toe with the right hand and the left toe with the left. Place the chin firmly on the breast and look fixedly at the tip of the nose. This is called Padmāsana and destroys all diseases'.

(c) योगनिद्रा At page 79 of the Bombay Sanskrit series No. III, Dr. G. Bühler C. I. E., observes

* "योगश्चित्तवृत्तिनिरोधः"

(पातञ्जलियोगशास्त्रम्)

“योगनिद्रा means originally ‘the sleep induced by the practice of Yoga,’ during which the soul is separated from the body and thereby becomes enabled to see the nature of all things. ‘Here it stands for deep meditation’ ”

XI. IV Dr J. Taylor in his translation of the Prabôdhachandîôdaya incredulously remarks in a footnote that when elephants want the female, or are inflamed from any cause, it is supposed that a certain liquid is secreted from two protuberances situated on the sides of the heads

But why Supposed ? Every one is fully aware of the fact of which the reader needs not be told or assured that in the rutting season the flow of a strong-scented liquid is generally seen on both sides of the frontal protuberances of bull elephants. The usual place from which the rut begins to come out is just behind the ear, but it is not uncommon to see its appearance in some other parts of the elephants’ body. Sanskrit authors are very fond of alluding to elephants in rut, and Bhartrihari himself has proved no exception to the rule as he has mentioned them several times in these Centuries.

XLIII. How beautiful is the metaphor which speaks of Desire as River, &c &c !

XLV Vata (वट) is a kind of tree with large broad leaves. It is one of the long-living, high-growing, and big-dimensioned trees to be found in pretty abundance both in the towns and forests of India. It being considered a favourite abode of Siva is eagerly sought after by Yogis.

XLVI. " The idca is this : The supplicant of the rich thinks the days too long, as he has to suffer the trouble of constant entreaties, often unsuccessful ; the person engaged in the pursuit of worldly objects thinks time too short, as he has never enough of it to compass all his numerous ends On the other hand, the philosopher, in the intervals of meditation laughs at both for delusions During meditations he is, of-course, unconscious of all these proceedings " K T. Telang.

XLIX. I would prefer with Mr. Telang, the reading दुकूलै. to चलक्ष्म्याः as marking better the contrast with वल्कलैः ।

LI. The ten directions are the North, North-east, East, South-east, South, South-west, West, North-west, Zenith (above), and Nâdir (below).

LIII. Samâdhi (समाधि) is thus defined in the 4th Chapter of the हठयोगप्रदीपिका—' सलिले सैन्धव यद्द्र त्साम्य भजति योगत । तथात्ममनसोरैक्य समाधिरभिधीयते ' which is translated by Śrīnivâsa Iyângâr, as follows : " As a grain of salt thrown into the water unites and becomes one with it, a like union between the Mind and the Atmâ is Samâdhi. " See also our Note to stanza LX (b)

LV. (a) It needs not to be told that there are four principal castes or Varnas among the Hindus, which are named ब्राह्मण, क्षत्रिय, वैश्य and शूद्र The first three are otherwise known as the Dvijas (द्विजा) or twiceborn, on account of their two births of (I) actual generation and (II) investiture with the Sacred thread. But according to some, the epithet Dvija

(द्विज) is limited only to the Brahmans. Compare

“ जन्मना ब्राह्मणो ज्ञेयः संस्कारैर्द्विज उच्यते ”

(b) Chândâla (चाण्डाल)—A general name for the lowest and most despised of the mixed castes originating from a Sûdra father and a Brahman mother. In the text the word is used for a man of this degraded caste.

LIX “ The implication is that nothing except devotion to Śiva is to be depended upon, as, for instance, the things enumerated. ” Telang.

LX (a) The Dekkan poets are held to be great masters of melody of their sweet mellifluous verses. See Kāvyaśāstra श्लेषः प्रसादः समता माधुर्यं सुकुमरता । अर्थव्यक्ति रुदारत्व मोज कान्तिसमाधय । &c &c.

(b) Samâdhi (समाधि) according to Nrisimhasaraswati, is व्युत्थाननिरोधसंस्कारयोरभिभवप्रादुर्भावे सति चित्तस्यैकाग्रतापरिणामः समाधिः । See Vedântasâra subôdhi, p 55. Mr K T Telang thus explains it according to the Vedântasâra ‘ an exclusive concentration upon the One Entity without distinct and separate consciousness of the knower, the known, and knowing and without even self consciousness’. Also compare, यत्सर्वं द्वन्द्वयो रैक्यं जीवात्मपरमात्मनो । समस्तनष्टसकल्पः समाधिः सा भिधीयते which occurs in the गोरक्षपद्धतिः at verse 86th

Strictly speaking Samâdhi is the eighth and last stage of Yoga. These eight stages of Râjayôga (राजयोग) are (1) Yama (यम), (2) Niyam (नियम), (3) Asana (आसन), (4) Prânâyâma (प्राणायाम), (5) Pratyâhâra (प्रत्याहार), (6) Dhâranâ (धारणा), (7) Dhyâna (ध्यान) and (8) Samâdhi (समाधि) But, here, the word Samâdhi may be taken to mean perfect and profound absorption of thought into the one object of meditation i. e. the supreme Being. See also our note to stanza LIII supra

(c) Chowry--As to the origin of these luxurious royal fans (चमर) vide Chapter 72 Slôka 1 of the वाराहिसहिता where it is said .

देवैश्चमर्य. किल वालहेतो. सृष्टाहि लक्ष्माद्यकंदरेषु ।

आशीतवर्णाश्च भवन्ति तासां कृष्णाश्च लाडूलभवा. सिताश्च ॥

Mr Wilkins in his Fables and Proverbs from Sanskrit observes in his footnote to the word Chamara that it is a kind of whisk made of the tail of a particular species of cow, and sometimes of peacock's feathers finely ornamented, used to chase the flies away

(d) I am inclined to take the stanza as furnishing internal evidence of Bhartuhari being a king

(e) In several editions including those of Bombay and Calcutta, this stanza is given a place in more than one Centuries of this poem

LXII Palâsa (पलाश) is, according to Mr Growse, "the Butea frondosa, a tree with scarlet flowers, which precede the new leaves, and when in full blossom make a striking sight, like a fire on the horizon"

LXIII It will be seen that many persons have been led to translate this stanza in a sense quite contrary to that in which it has here been presented to the reader For comparison, we would beg to quote the following

"Our former opinion was, 'You and We are we and You,' (i. e. You are different from we) Oh friend what is become now that we consider you like selves.

(Mr Durga Prasad)

To my mind the original text as herein given cannot admit of any other interpretation but that which we have sought to convey in our Hindi and English translations For the cessation of worldly ties of kinship, friendship &c. in Vanâgya, we have the authority of the Mahâbhârata .

पितामहो ऽ स्मि स्यविर. पितापुत्रश्च भारत ।

ममेव यूयमात्मस्था न मे यूय न वो वयम् ॥

LXVIII Vidyâdhara (विद्याधर)—A class of demigods or semidivine beings The name Vidyâdhara is applied to one of the ten species of divine beings These are enumerated as follows in the Amarakôśa —

विद्याधरा प्सरोयक्ष रक्षो गन्धर्व किन्नरा ।

पिशाचो गुह्यक. सिद्धो भूतो ऽ मी देवयोनय. ॥

LXIX (a) Meru (मेरु)—See our Note LXXX (a) in the Nîṭisataka

(b) Yuga (युग)—See our Note to Stanza LXXXIV in the Nîṭisataka

LXX (a) "Actions done in a past life lead to results in the succeeding life, and to obtain freedom from the perpetual round of birth and death thus arising, all कर्म must be destroyed Of. Śârîrika Bhâsya, p. 1075." K. T. Telang.

(b) "The bodies and conditions of transmigrating souls are, according to their works good or evil in antecedent states from time without beginning The merits and demerits and the embodiments are from eternity Seed from plant, and plant from seed, but who shall assign priority to either? From such fruition of merits as long as soul is implicated with body, there is no escape

 This implication of soul with bodies, animal, vegetable, human, ultrahuman, and divine, is the source of all misery. In all its stages the soul tastes little but pain, sickness, death, and severance from all that it would fain cling to. Even in the highest embodiments there is disparity, and a consequent sense of insufficiency, and there is the certainty of their expiring upon the exhaustion of the merits which procured them. Paradise and places of torment are only stages in the endless journey..... This repeated embodiment of souls results from merits, merits from activity, activity from desires and aversions, desires and aversions from identifying the soul with that which is not soul, with the body, the senses, the intellect (Gough-in Calcutta Review). ”

Prof Tawney.

LXXI Kalpa (कल्प)—See Note on Stanza XVI (a) in the Nitiśataka.

LXXIV Brahma (ब्रह्म) or Brahman (ब्रह्मन्) is the supreme Being, regarded as impersonal and divested of all quality and action. Prof Apte says that according to the Vedāntists Brahman is both the efficient and the material cause of the visible Universe, the all-pervading soul and spirit of the universe, the essence from which are created things produced and into which they are absorbed.

LXXV Pātāla (पाताल) is the lowest sphere as explained in Note (c) to Stanza XXII. supra.

LXXVII (a) Sānta (शान्त) is equal to free from passions.

(b). Muni (मुनि) is a saint. In its original meaning the word signifies one who observes the vow of silence

LXXVIII. त्रिलोकी—The three worlds are enumerated as the (1) heaven, (11) earth and (111) hell.

LXXIX. (a) According to Prof Apte the Vedas or the holy Scriptures of the Hindus were originally three, but a fourth was subsequently added to them, and their number is now generally considered to be four. They are (1) the ऋग्वेद ; (2) the यजुर्वेद ; (3) the सामवेद ; and (4) the अथर्ववेद. According to the strict orthodox faith of the Hindus the Vedas are अपौरुषेय, ' not human compositions, ' being supposed to be directly revealed by the Supreme Being, and are called ' Sruti ' i e ' what is heard or revealed ' as distinguished from ' Smriti, ' i e ' what is remembered or is the work of human origin. '

(b) The Smritis as distinguished from the Vedas are the theological writings from the pen of the Rishis, patriarchs and sages

(c) Purānas (पुराण) are the well-known sacred works of the Hindus, dealing with theology, history, mythology &c. They are eighteen in number viz—

(1) ब्रह्मपुराण ; (2) पद्मपुराण , (3) विष्णुपुराण , (4) शिवपुराण ; (5) भागवतपुराण ; (6) नारदपुराण ; (7) मार्कण्डेयपुराण ; (8) अग्निपुराण , (9) भविष्यपुराण ; (10) ब्रह्मवैवर्तपुराण ; (11) लिङ्गपुराण ; (12) वराहपुराण ; (13) स्कन्दपुराण , (14) वामनपुराण ; (15) कूर्मपुराण ; (16) मत्स्यपुराण , (17) गरुडपुराण ; and (18) ब्रह्माण्डपुराण. It is generally believed that they have all been written by Vyāsa or Vedavyāsa, the son of Parāśara and Satyavatī. The literal meaning of the word

Purâna is old. According to Mr Wilkins the term purâna (literally ancient) is given to such Hindu books as treat of Creation in general, with the particular genealogy, and history of their gods and heroes of antiquity.

LXXXI. Professor Tawney translates शफरी as the nunnow

LXXXII. Brahma (ब्रह्म) - See Note to Stanza LXXIV supra

LXXXV. (a) Mr. K. T. Telang notes that 'the force of all my delusion being destroyed by the pure knowledge which shines forth in consequence of the great extent of merit resulting from contact with you, I would merge into the Supreme Brahma.'

(b) The body is admittedly composed of the Panchamahâbhûtas or the five elements, viz-earth water, fire, air and sky or ether.

(c) As a footnote to his poetical version of the stanza, Prof Tawney quotes the following passage from Green's History of the English People, p. 144. - "The life of Francis falls like a stream of tender light across the darkness of the time. He strips himself of all, he flings his very clothes at his father's feet, that he may be one with Nature and God. His passionate verse claims the moon for his sister, the Sun for his brother; he calls on his brother the Wind, and his sister the Water. His last cry was a Welcome, Sister Death."

LXXXIX Vinâ वीणा is thus explained by Mr Wilkins in a footnote at p. 120 of Morley's Universal Library No 30.—“ An instrument of the string kind very much esteemed in India. It is constructed of a long piece of wood upon which a number of steel strings are strained, and which serves also for the finger board it being furnished with frets almost from one extremity to the other, with each end fixed horizontally upon the pole (if the expression be allowed) of a large pumpkin, or an oblate sphere of wood hollowed for the purpose

XCI. “ People misunderstand the mere cure of pain as itself a pleasure ” K. T. Telang

XCIV. Mr Telang here differs from all commentators who unanimously explain दुःखासिकानाम् as referring to the family of the कौश्यविद्वान् spoken of in the text. However, the learned scholar remarks : “ I cannot say what they mean. But the idea intended seems to be that of proud wealthy men. ” However the reader will see for himself the propriety of our following the Sanskrit Commentaries in thus translating the stanza which as herein rendered gives a very intelligent and powerful idea Kṛiṣṇa Sāstri Mahābala in prefacing the Slōka thus sums up its substance . विपद्गस्ते कुटुम्बे स्पृहां कृत्वा दुःखेन स्थित्यपेक्षया परमसुखदो गङ्गातीरे निवासः श्रेयान् ।

C. शून्य is a technical term of the Yoga philosophy, and refers to absolute nonexistence It is also used as a name of Brahman. In Bhāṛṭṛihari-nirveda (III 18) गोरक्षनाथ thus advises भर्तृहरि-विषयेभ्यः समाहृत्य मनः शून्ये निवेशय । स्वयमानन्दमात्मानं स्वप्रकाशमुपैष्यसि ॥

CX. (a) Koorma or Kamatha—See Note to stanza XXXV (b) in the Nīṭisātaka

(b) Dhruva (ध्रुव)—The son of Uttānapāda being slighted by his step-mother left his home with the determination of winning himself a name in the world. By the advice of the seven Rishis he devoted himself to the service of Vishnu, and was finally exalted by the God to the heavens where he shines as the polestar

(c) ब्रह्माण्ड is the egg of Brahman e. i. the universe

(d). उदम्बर is a kind of large tree known in Hindusthān by the name of Goolāra. The interior of its fruit is the reputed scat of innumerable insects.

CXI Chakravāka (चक्रवाक)—Name of a bird. Mr. Growse remarks that the male and female Chakravā are doomed for ever to nocturnal separation and are said to pass the night on the opposite banks of a river or pond, vainly calling to each other to cross

CXIV I think the reading ससाराङ्के would be far better than that of the text i. e. ससारान्ते.

CXV. शूली is a name of Śiva on account of his holding a trident in his hand

CXVI. Vairāgya See Note to Stanza XCVIII. (a) in the Sringarāsataka and also Note B in the Vairāgya sataka.
